HONORARY MEMBER OF THE ROYAL INSTITUTION OF CORNWALL, ETC.

PARISH OF ST. MENEFREDA, ALLAS ST. MINFRE.
ALLAS ST. MINVER.

The parish of St. Minver, which is large and compact, is bounded on the south, for a short distance, by the parish of Eglashayle, from which it is separated by a small tidal creek, and, afterwards, by the bayle or estuary of the Alan; on the west by Padstow harbour; on the north by the Atlantic Ocean; and on the east by the parishes of St. Endellion and St. Kew. The boundary line between this parish and the last named is particularly described in the terrier printed, Hist. of Trigg, vol. ii, p. 77. The total area of St. Minver, is 7578a. 2r. 27½ perches,¹ of which the greater part is arable.

INDUSTRIES AND CONDITION OF THE WORKING CLASSES.

Formerly a great deal of corn was shipped at Rock, but during the last twenty-five years the sand has so much encroached as to render the access of vessels to the pier difficult, and shipments have almost ceased.

For some years lead mines were worked at Pentireglaze, Polzeath, and Trebederick but without much success, and they have now been for a long time closed.

Except that a few persons earn a livelihood by gathering cockles from the sands in Padstow harbour, which are estimated to produce about £600 a year, there is no other industry practised besides the cultivation of the soil.²

² The Rev. William Sandys, writing to Lysons in 1812, says: "the parish is famous for its sheep and its wool, the quantity of the latter being about 70,000lbs. yearly." He adds: "Annual tillage of grain, including about 100 acres of oats and 1700 acres Cornish measure (2021 acres statute measure) of wheat and barley, exceeded by none in the kingdom, which is owing, principally, to the facility of procuring the best sea manures, a circumstance which augments the value of the land."

Through the kindness of Mr. J. D. Bryant to whom we are indebted for much other valuable information concerning the present state of the parish, and of Mr. S. Symons, both of St. Minver, we have been favoured with the following details of the present annual production of the parish for comparison with the above figures:—

The chief landowners are: H. R. H. The Duke of Cornwall in respect to the manor of Penmayne, Edward Stephens, Esq. for the Trewornan Estate, Mrs. Stephens for the Sandys Estate, Colonel Tremayne, W. Arundell Yeo, Esq., Lord Robartes, Hon. G. M. Portescue, and Mrs. Potter.

The wages of agricultural laborers are 12s. a week: they are also provided with wood for fuel and an allotment for vegetables, which is ploughed and prepared for them by the farmers. This is considered equivalent to 1s. a week more. The rate, by the year, for men not enjoying these advantages is 2s. 6d. a day. A few men hold cottages rent free, but in respect to these additional services are given.

The villages in the parish, beside the Church Town, which contain more than ten dwellings are: Rock and Stop-a-tide, Tredrizzick, Penmayne, and Polzeath.

The parish, for local purposes, is divided into two townships called highlands and lowlands.

The number of dwelling houses and the population, as shown in the census returns at the several decennia in the present century, are as under:

	1801	1811	1821	1831	1841	1851	1861	1871

About 34,000lbs. of wool, 424 bullocks, averaging each $4\frac{1}{2}$ cwt., 2040 quarters of wheat, 2300 quarters of barley and 250 quarters of oats. The basis of the statements not being alike, the comparison is not so apposite as it might otherwise have been. The production of wool, it will be observed, is about half the quantity it was in 1812. The system of farming has been changed. In 1812, with the exception of a few cows and working oxen, no cattle were kept. Sheep formed the only stock. So that the introduction of improvements in agriculture has been the means of producing, at present prices, £5000 worth of beef in lieu of £1800 worth of wool. The acreage of corn we presume to be much the same, and as Mr. Sandys does not state the yield we have no means of comparison.

¹ Including both highlands and lowlands.

² There has been a gradual decrease of the agricultural population in the highlands and lowlands since 1821, arising from the introduction of machinery and consequent decreased demand for manual labour. In the lowlands the decrease from these causes was more than counterbalanced by the introduction of miners to work the lead mines. These mines were closed before 1861, since which the population has decreased in both districts.

GEOLOGY.

The geological formation of this parish is, generally, the same as that of the adjoining parishes of St. Endellion, St. Kew, and Egloskayle; consisting of the Devonian, or argillaceous, slate, often variegated, especially in the eastern part of the parish, as in St. Kew. These slates are traversed by numerous courses of greenstone which end, somewhat abruptly, near the Camel, and the slates are continued without them, except a large course north of Padstow (which ends at Permizen Point) and the headland at Stepper Point. An elvan dyke (see Hist. of Trigg, vol. ii, p. 79) rising in St. Teath and traversing the parish of St. Kew, crosses this parish in a due westerly direction to Lower Penmayne. The trappean rocks of greenstone and other varieties break through the slates in a manner to shew that the latter were consolidated before the igneous molten matter was erupted among them. These eruptions in some places assume quite a volcanic character. This is particularly observable in Cant hill, on "the Rumps," and in some of the little islets on the north coast, which are quite conical in form.¹

Two patches of limestone have also been observed in this parish, the first cropping out at Dinham, and the latter, a band extending about a mile east and west, near Rock. They are probably continuations of the same course which may be seen at Padstow and at Permizen Point, in which fossils have been found.

Flint Drift and Raised Beaches—Over a large portion of the lowlands of this parish shattered flints and flint flakes are found on the surface, and imbedded in the sub-soil below the reach of the ordinary plough; that they are of ancient date is obvious from their being also found in the undisturbed soil which, for a long period, has been covered by the hills of blown sand along the coast line of Padstow Harbour. This flint drift extends from Hayle Bay to Trewornan, and flints have also been found on Pentire. There can be no doubt that they are of natural formation. The beds are not limited to this district; Mr. Whitley has found them along the north coasts of Devon and Cornwall, extending from Morte Point, in the former county, to the Land's End. Moreover, they are not confined to the coast line, but have been found at three places on the granite plateau of Dartmoor, on the moors of the Brownwilly range, on the high lands of Davidstow and elsewhere, and Mr. Whitley has traced the trail of the drift into South Wales, and to its native place in the disrupted chalk of Antrim.²

On that part of the coast of Trebederick called Greenway is a raised beach of considerable thickness, in some places consisting of water-worn round stones and pebbles, chiefly quartz. Along the cliff on the north-east of Hayle Bay may also be observed a sedimentary deposit, some 20 ft above the present high water mark, and at a place called "Stinking Gugg," near the headland of Pentire, is a raised beach, at about the same level, containing water-worn stones of sandstone, and stones of other character, and fragments of slate rock, which do not appear to have been subjected to the action of water, &c., imbedded in a silicious sand cemented by oxide of iron and forming a kind of conglomerate.

The Sands.—About a square mile of the lowland district of this parish has been buried by an inundation of sand arising from the sea, and covering the soil in some places many feet deep. There is no precise record when this calamity occurred. Inasmuch, however, as it is not confined to this parish, but prevails along a considerable portion of the north coast of Cornwall, where the land is not protected by high cliffs, we may conclude that the disaster was of a general nature. Leland, writing, in 1540, of the peninsula on which St. Ives is built, says: "most parte of the houses be sore oppressed or over coverid with sandes, that the stormy windes and rages castith up there. This calamite hath continued ther litle above 20 yeres." He adds: "The best part of the town now standith in the south part of the peninsula, up toward another hille, for defence from the sandes.....the pere is chokid with sand." Of S. Piranes in the Sandes, he says: "The shore from St. Ives is sore plagued to S. Carantokes, with sandes."¹ And Norden, writing, about forty years later of Lelant says: "Of late the sand hath buried much of the landes and howses, and many devises they use to prevent the obsorption of their Church." Of Perran he says: "the parish is almost drowned with the sand in such sort as the inhabitants have been once already forced to remove their Church."² Carew, also, writing towards the end of the century, says: "Of Saint Peran we have spoken before, which too well brooketh his surname, in Zabulo, for the light sand carried up by the north wind from the sea shore daily continueth his covering, and marring the land adioynant, so as the distress of this deluge draue the inhabitants to remove their Church; howbeit, when it meeteth with any crossing brooke the same (by a secret antipathy) restraineth, and barreth his farder ineroaching that way."²

Tradition states that the drifting of the sand was so sudden and violent, that in two nights many houses were covered, and that this has been confirmed by the discovery of houses, like those of Pompeii, with the furniture in them. It is also said that a village was buried in the little valley near St. Enodoc's Chapel. Probably the existence of the Roman remains, presently to be noticed, gave rise to this belief. The Church of St. Enodoc itself, like the ancient Churches of Perran Zabulo and Gwithian, has been nearly covered, and even now the sands surrounding it are higher than the roofs. The sands are continually shifting, but it is said that the quantity has diminished rather than increased during living memory.

Though, in consequence of some special circumstances, there may have been some sudden and large eruption of sand at a particular time, that drift sand existed on the manor of Penmayne at an early date is, we think, very certain. The Ministers' accounts for the Duchy of Cornwall shew that in 1402 such great waste and destruction of land arose within the manor of Tywarnhaile, in consequence of the influx of sand from the sea, that the tenants of the manor were unable to pay their rents.¹ It does not appear that the tenantry of the manor of Penmayne were similarly distressed, for the accounts shew that their rents were regularly paid. Nevertheless the causes which produced the drift on one part of the coast would, in like manner, affect any other exposed to it, and it is not unlikely that as the irruption on Penmayne was on common land, the cultivated tenements remained uninjured. The waste of Spire, which is the district covered, was held by the tenants of the manor of Penmayne in 1337,² and continued to be taken by them at every assession. It may, however, be worthy of remark, that in 1457, the Ministers' Accounts of the manor of Penmayne shew that there was then a rabbit-warren there which was let to Sir John Colshill, Knight, at the annual rent of 6s. 8d. per annum. The disaster which occurred at Tywarhayle was more than a century earlier than the time mentioned by Leland, and the Ministers' accounts of the latter date do not shew any failure on the part of the tenantry.

² Carew's Survey of Cornwall, first edition, p. 148. This we imagine arises from the light sand which drifts along the surface of the ground, falling into the channel and being washed away by the stream.

PRE-HISTORIC REMAINS.

The headland of the "Rumps" which is situate opposite to Tintagel, of which it commands a view, on the opposite side of the bay, was strongly fortified by three high walls supported by as many deep ditches. There is a tumulus on "Timer's Hill" on Trenant Farm, which is about 60 ft. in diameter, and is now 10 ft. high; and on the site of the Roman settlement upon Padstow Harbour, near St. Enodoe Chapel, presently to be mentioned, Archdeacon Trollope, a few years ago, in investigating the site of the settlement, observed a sandy tumulus in the midst of a circular space surrounded by a boundary of drifted sand. It was 40 ft. in diameter and 5 ft. high, rather thickly strewn with small stones, apparently for the purpose of preventing the light materials of its surface from being blown away.

With assistance of Mr. Prideaux-Brune, the tumulus was opened by driving a wide trench through it. It was found that ashes had been mingled with the sand, and pieces of charcoal were turned up, until on arriving at the centre of the mound, about 2 ft. from the top, a small heap of calcined human bones was discovered, but unaccompanied by any appearance of an urn. Beneath this deposit was a large heap of wood ashes, but nothing else was found below though the ground was excavated to the natural rock. It was, however, observed that a small circular shaft had been sunk in this rock and filled in again with fragments of the rock, pieces of quartz, and sand; suggesting to the Archdeacon that at some distant date it had probably been examined.³

On the top of Bray hill a tumulus was also opened, but at that time nothing was discovered, the trench having been driven on one side of the interment. A day or two afterwards, the side of the trench having fallen in, a large urn was observed. Unfortunately it was broken, but fragments of it are still in the possession of Mr. Thomas, who resides on the hill. It is of the British period, and is ornamented by the British zig-zag pattern. On the east side of the same hill, in opening a quarry, Saxon graves were discovered. They were formed of a few slate stones set on edge, and covered with stones of the same kind. They were only just below the surface of the land and still remain open, and yet contain fragments of human bones.

It may also be here noticed that a sub-marine forest exists in a small bay, called Daymer Bay, within Padstow harbour, lying north-west of St. Enodoc Church. Its existence has been long known, and its position is shewn on old maps. About a century ago, by reason of the dislodgment of the sand, a large quantity of trunks and roots of trees were recovered. In 1857, from the same cause, the forest was again exposed about 12 ft. below high water mark. It was found to consist of stumps and roots of oaks, yews, and also of some soft wooded trees, the former of large size blackened with age, and so indurated as to give a ringing metallic sound when struck with an axe. There were also a great number of hazel nuts, lying layer below layer, separated from each other by a thin vegetable deposit produced by the fall of the leaf during many successive years. Mixed with these were the horns and teeth of the red deer, and the remains of other animals. The sand has again now covered this interesting object.

THE ROMAN STATION.

Camden was of opinion that the Romans during their occupation of this country never penetrated west of the Tamar. Setting aside the improbability of their not exploring a district so famous for its metallic riches as the Cassiterides, the large discoveries of Roman remains, of different kinds, which have been made since Camden's days, and especially of coins in great numbers and of various periods, renders it certain that energetic people were no strangers in Cornwall. That they had a small settlement, if not of a permanent at least of a temporary character, and of some duration, on the western side of Padstow Harbour, is, we think, abundantly proved by the discoveries which from time to time have been made upon the site, and it is probable that were it not for the sand, which has buried the whole area many feet deep, further evidences of their residence here would appear, for it is remarkable that no vestige of a Roman building has been brought to light. Fragments of Roman pottery have been found in abundance, consisting of portions of small vessels with nearly pointed bottoms, and the rims and handles of others of red, grey, and cream coloured wares, besides numerous pieces of Samian vases. Many fragments of Roman glass of good quality, thin and clear, have been discovered, chiefly portions of bottles and vases of a light green, or amber tint. One fragment was of a violet blue, and a few blue and variegated beads of the usual Roman type have been picked up. The surface of the locality is strewn with small pieces of bronze ornaments, and, occasionally, upon the shifting of the sands, perfect specimens have been found, consisting of ornamental nails, or studs, a bronze fibula, representing a bird, a pretty little pectinular fibula in perfect condition, various other fibulae, a pair of tweezers with two short pieces of chain attached to them, &c.; but the most curious find among these Roman remains was a necklace of pink coral; many short pieces of that substance have been gathered up almost in their natural condition, but perforated so as to admit of their being strung.¹ Several of such pieces are still in the collection formed by the late Mr. Thomas Kent of Padstow, and now in the possession of his daughter, as well as the other objects above mentioned. Such rudely shaped beads are rarely found among objects of Roman antiquities, and indicate, we think, an earlier British occupation of the spot.

A coin of the Emperor Gallienus, who died in the year 268, two of Constantinus Maximus, who died in the year 361, struck to commemorate the building of Constantinople, and various others have been found at this spot. It has been supposed that the estuary of the river Alan is identical with the estuary of the Cenio, or Kenio, of Ptolemy, and the town the Cenia of Richard of Cirencester. Ptolemy, however, places his Kenio on the south coast, with which the Fal would very well agree, not only in position but in name, for the words have the same meaning; and it has been considered that Tregony is the site of Cenia. We are, however, in this dilemma. At St. Minver Roman remains have been found in abundance, and they have also been found at Trevone on the opposite side of Padstow Harbour, but, so far as we know, not a single Roman object has ever been discovered at Tregony, and we are inclined to think we must look elsewhere for Cenia,

ANCIENT ROADS AND TRACKS.

The great road from the north-east of the county, as we have before stated (ante vol. i. p. 484) entered this parish from St. Endellion, at a place called "Plain Street," a name clearly indicating its Roman origin. That this was a Roman road, in the proper sense of the word, is not probable. The Roman traffic in the county was not sufficient to induce the Romans to construct roads according to their usual design, but as they had stations in Cornwall they undoubtedly had access to them by land as well as by sea, though the latter was perhaps their usual means of intercourse. They doubtless used the British roads.²

¹ See Archdeacon Trollope's paper, "Archæol. Journ.," vol. xvii, pp. 511. Many of the objects are there figured, the whole of which, except No. 12, were found at St. Minver, and are now in the possession of Miss Kent.

² That the Romans had, or used, roads in Cornwall is manifest from the recent discovery that the inscribed stone which, in 1853, was found built into the wall of St. Hilary Church, is a Columna Miliaria, set up by Flavius Constantine and commemorating also his father Constantine the Great. The inscription, so far as it has been deciphered, is, in ten lines:—IMP CAES | FLAVI[O] | CONSTANTINO | PIO IN[VICTO] | CAES | DIVI | CONSTANTI | PI | AVG | FILIO. Which may be read:—"To the Emperor Caesar | Flavius | Constantinus | the pious and invincible | Caesar | of the deified | Constantius | the pious | Augustus | the son." | The stone was found on the line of road from the Roman camp at Condurra to St. Michael's Mount. A somewhat different reading of the inscription is given in the Archæol. Camb. 1858, p. 176, where the date assigned to this stone is between A.D. 335 and A.D. 337. A millary, with an inscription almost identical with that at St. Hilary, has been discovered close to the edge of the Ermine Street, near Anaster. This last has been figured by Archd. Trollope in the Archæological Journal, xxvii. 13. See also Wright's "Celt. Roman, and Saxon," p. 355, and Hübner's "Inc. Brit. Lat.," pp. 12 and 211.

After passing Plain Street, the ancient road traversed the northern part of the parish, skirting the sea-coast as nearly as practicable, to the fortified headland now called "The Rumps, near Pentire head." Across the rabbit warren near the station, the road is well defined, but it is obliterated in the cultivated fields above for some distance. The road to the Roman station branched off from this about a mile from Plain Street, passing by Maesmere and through Treglynes; and, crossing the little brook just below Roserrowe, passed over the hill in a direct line to the station. Traces now remain on the crest of the hill south of Trenean, but on the western side, near the station, the land has been overwhelmed by sand from the sea. Another road branched off from that first above-mentioned, about half a mile further from Plain Street, which led to Polzeath at the head of Hayle, or Hell, Bay, and thence across the hill southward to another bay in Padstow harbour, before mentioned, called Daymer Bay, near the Roman station aforesaid.¹

Another road entered this parish from the parish of St. Kew at Rooke Mill, and proceeded in nearly a straight line to St. Minver Church town, whence several roads emanated, viz., one which fell into the road abovementioned as leading to Polzeath: a second proceeded northwards, and, crossing the road first abovementioned, led to Portquin; and a third extended in a south-west direction to Blackrock, where the ferry crosses to Padstow. Another important road from Penpont, in the parish of St. Kew and one from Egloshayle, entering the parish converged at St. Minver Church Town. Several other devious roads or tracks, traversed the parish, which it is unnecessary to particularise.

ANCIENT CHRISTIAN MONUMENTS.

40. Opposite to the south door of St. Michael's Chapel is an ancient massive granite cross, which was removed to that position from the western end of the Church. It is of a very unusual character. The head is 2ft. 9in. across, and the symbol is of the form of (what heraldically is called) a cross degraded; that is, the extremities are fixed in a step, or degree, and are united by a rim or circle, the panels within the arms of the cross being pierced. The short shaft, upon which the head is set, is only 1ft. in height, and it is 1ft. 6in. wide, and about 8in. thick. The sides of the shaft and also the side of the head within the extremities of the symbol, which slightly project, are filled with sculptured ornament. The stone is a granite of coarse texture.

¹ Whilst these pages were passing through the press, an article appeared in No. xviii of "The Journal of the Royal Institution of Cornwall," On the extent and nature of the Roman occupation of Cornwall, by Mr. N. Whitley, one of the Honorary Secretaries to the Institution. Mr. Whitley gives a long list, which he states to be imperfect, of places in Cornwall where Roman coins and other remains have been found, and he gives a map, in which he shews the probable sites of the roads which he considers were used by that people. So far as our examination of the roads in the Deanery of Trigg Minor are concerned, we consider Mr. Whitley has placed the Roman road too far south, but we agree with him in his general deductions.

41. Another cross is in the Church-yard of St. Enodoc. The head, which was broken off, was found at the time of the restoration of the Church built into the old fence of the churchyard, and the cross was repaired and set up in its present position at the expense of F. J. Hext of Tredethy, Esq. It is of the usual way side type. The shaft, which stands in a socket, is three feet two inches high, and the head 1 ft. 8 in. in diameter. The symbol is slender in form, slightly of the Greek character, and within a marginal rim.

42. At Rooke Mill are two rough perforated stones, one standing in the stream which divides St. Minver from St. Kew, on the St. Minver side, as a post for a fence, and the other forming part of a foot bridge over the same stream. They appear to have been portions of a four holed cross, at some time divided for some utilitarian purpose. The portion used in the bridge is 5 ft. in length, and has probably been shortened, for the other is longer, but how much it is difficult to say with certainty as it is set in the ground.

43. Set up as a rubbing post in a field, near the Quakers' burial ground, on the farm of Treglines, is a small Latin cross. It measures 3 ft. in height, and the arms are about 6 in. in length. It is made of granite, and is set about 1 ft. deep in the ground.

The ancient inscribed stone on Doydon head, in this parish, we have already described, see Hist. of Trigg Minor, vol. i, p. 485.

MEETING HOUSES OF DISSENTERS.

Quakers' Meeting House.—About the end of the seventeenth century there was a considerable number of Quakers in this parish, and they established near Treglynes a Meeting House with a small burial ground annexed. The burials here were recorded in the parish register. The first entry was in 1695, and we find twenty-eight such burials between that date and 1742, about two thirds of the interments being those of women. Both the Meeting house and the burial ground had ceased to be used before the present century as the sect had become extinct in the parish. No trace of the building can now be found, but the burial ground, which is partially enclosed by a wall, yet remains. It is planted with trees now of about thirty years' growth. The wall is much decayed, but the place is, to some extent, attended to at the expense of some members of the Society.

The tide of modern dissent did not set in in this parish so early as in many others, nor does it appear to have taken so strong a hold upon the people. The Rev. William Sandys, then vicar, writing to Lysons in 1812, says, "At the present time there is no dissenter of any denomination in my parish. There are some Methodists indeed, among the lowest class, who attend the Church Service, but the itinerary preachers, called 'roundmen,'¹ have for some time made their appearance, but have not been able to form a society or collect subscriptions.² The parish, however, did not long enjoy this immunity, for in 1815 a small Meeting House was erected at Tredrizzick, presently to be noticed, and on 24th March 1821, upon the application of William Beiley, described as of Jacobstow, a house in the occupation of William Chelew at Rosewin was registered in the Court of the Archdeaconry of Cornwall as a place of meeting for Brianites; and on 10th March 1826, upon the application of Charles Hall, a barn belonging to William Blake at Tregema was registered in the same Court as place of meeting for Protestant Dissenters, the particular denomination not being stated.³

Wesleyan Methodists.—By Indenture, dated 3rd May 1842 and inrolled in Chancery,⁴ Digory Gray of Endellion, Yeoman, conveyed to Henry Vercoe of Egloshayle, Yeoman, and others, a piece of land containing four yards, or thereabouts, being part of a field called Cross Park, adjoining the road leading to Rock, wherein a Meeting House, or Chapel, was intended to be built, the said field being part of the customary lands of the manor of Penmayne, to hold to the said Henry Vercoe, and others, for the term of 500 years, upon the usual trust of the people called Methodists, at the annual rent at fourpence per annum.

This building is situate at a place called "Stop-a-tide," near Rock, and seats 132 persons, and there are 14 members of the society now (1875) attached to it.

¹ He calls them "Modern Jesuits" from their following the example of that Order and the same rules, which never permitted their missionaries to be long resident in the same place.

Wesleyan Methodist Free Church.—A Meeting House for Wesleyan Methodists was erected at Tredrizzick in 1815, and was enlarged in 1835. It was vested in trustees but the trust deed was not inrolled, consequently when the schism took place in the Wesleyan body, the trustees, who took part with the seceding party, carried the building with them to the Wesleyan Methodist Association. By deed dated 9th May 1854,¹ Simon Wilcock of St. Minver, Yeoman, in consideration of the sum of £10, conveyed to Charles Ivey, of the same parish, Cordwainer, and others, a piece of land in a field called Chapel Meadow, at Tredrizzick, containing 30 ft by 24 ft., on which piece of land, it is stated, “the western end of the Methodist Association Chapel has been erected,” to hold to the uses of the trusts expressed in the model deed, dated 27th January 1842, of the people called the Wesleyan Methodist Association. This acquisition would appear to have been for the purpose of extending the building. Whether or not any addition was then made to it we cannot say, but it was entirely rebuilt in 1874, and will now seat 250 persons. There are 48 registered members, and 60 Sunday School scholars.

Bible Christians.—This body has a Meeting House at Trevanger, built upon a piece of land given by Mr. Rowe of that place. It was erected in 1872, and is vested in trustees, but the trust deed is not inrolled. The building will seat 100 persons, and there are eight registered members of the society.

THE RECTORY AND ADVOWSON OF THE CHURCH.

At the earliest date of which we have any record, the Rectory and Advowson of the Church would seem to have formed parcel of a lordship in St. Minver, held by a family named de Tregrunan, Tregrenan or Tregenuran. In 1255, Joynus de Tregrunan suffered a fine to Richard Prior of Bodmin, of one acre of land in Hensens, of the moiety of the Church of Sancta Menfreda in the ville de Sancta Menfreda, together with the homage and all the services of William de Sancta Menfreda for all the tenements which the said William first held of the said Joynus, to hold to the said Prior and his successors for ever, in right of his Church of Bodmin, in free and perpetual alms, the said Prior to pay scutage when levied for the eighth part of one Knight's fee for all secular services, suits of Court, homages, &c., &c.; and for this fine the Prior received the said Joynus to all benefits of the prayers in the said Church for ever. William de Sancta Menfreda was present at the making of this fine, and did homage to the Prior for the tenements which he held.² In 1302, Silvestre de Tregenuran, probably the son of Joynus and Meliora his wife, by another fine recognised the Advowson of the Church of Sancta Meynureda as the right of Gervas Prior of Bodmin, and the Church of St. Petrock there, and for this fine the said Prior gave the said Sylvestre and Meliora one sparrow-hawk; and because it appeared to the Justices upon inquisition taken before them that the Prior and his predecessors, and the Church of Bodmin, were in seizin of the said advowson long before the making of the statute in mortmain,³ there was no collusion, and therefore they allowed the fine to be levied.⁴

³ The Statute of Mortmain passed 7th Edward I.

It is not very clear whether or no the Priory of Bodmin was in possession of a moiety of the rectory of this parish previous to the grant of a moiety by Joynus de Tregurman in 1255, but the confirmation of Silvester de Tregemuran in 1302, would seem to apply to the entirety. The rectory and advowson of the Church remained vested in the Priory until the dissolution of the house in 1538, when the value of the sheaf tithe was £14 13s. 6d. per annum.¹

We have already stated that the Prior and Convent of Bodmin in 1537, the year before the Priory was dissolved, granted a lease of the rectories of Bodmin, St. Minver, Padstow, and St. Cubert, for a term of 77 years, at the annual rent of £56 12s. 10d., to Nicholas Prideaux, and that such lease was confirmed under the Great Seal on 31st July 1544; and that though, from some circumstance with which we are not acquainted, that lease was terminated in 1578, the said rectories with all the sheaf tithe were released to Roger Prideaux and Phillippa his wife and Edmond their son for the term of their lives and the longest liver of them. And upon surrender of this lease and payment of a fine of £50 on the 23rd January 1584, a new lease was made of all the tithes of the said four parsonages to Phillippa Prideaux the mother of Edmond and to the said Edmond jointly for their lives, remainder after to Humphry Prideaux, nephew of the said Edmond, during his life, at the same rent.² Soon after this Phillippa and Edmond Prideaux granted a lease of the tithes of St. Minver to Nicholas Dagge of St. Kew, Yeoman, and Thomas Kent of St. Minver, Yeoman, and their assigns for the term of ten years at the rent of £70 per annum. This led to some litigation. Francis Penkevill of St. Minver, Esq., as was alleged by a bill filed in Chancery, after the death of Phillippa Prideaux, which happened in 1597, by Edward Prideaux and the aforesaid Nicholas Dagge and Thomas Kent, having divers great bartons and lands in the parish, almost one fourth of the parish, in his possession and occupation, had for three years refused to pay his tithes. Penkevill answered that he refused because the rent so raised might not be raised on the inhabitants by conscionable, honest, and good dealings, and that the unconscionable dealings of the joint farmers were well known. And he further stated that he had always set out the tenth part of all his corn, and that the farmers might have taken it to their own use.³ We do not know how this dispute terminated, but by letters patent dated 10th December 1600, a new lease of the rectories of the four parishes was granted to Edmond Prideaux and Peter Prideaux his son for their lives, remainder to Humphry nephew of Edmond as before, at the same rent,⁴ subject to which lease, by letters patent dated 5th January 1608-9, the rectories and sheaf tithe of the said four parishes, and the right of patronage of the vicarages of the said parishes were granted, inter alia, to Thomas Aileworth, Esq., and Robert Duke, Gent., to hold to them their heirs and assigns for ever of the manor of East Greenwich by fealty in free and common socage, and the annual rent of £56 12s. 10d.⁵ This purchase was in trust for the Prideaux family, in which family the inappropriate rectories of these parishes remained vested until after the death of Sir John Prideaux of Netherton, Bart., in 1766,¹ when, after lengthened proceedings in Chancery, by deed dated 29th September 1789, it was sold to the Rev. William Sandys of St. Minver, by whose representative it is still held.

THE VICARAGE.

The Vicarage of St. Minver was assigned by Bishop Bronescombe during his visit to St. Brured on Saturday after the feast of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin 1269, when he assigned to vicar Ecclesie Sancte Menurede all the attilage, or small tithes, and the whole of the glebe, which was then valued at 10s.² At Pope Nicholas's valuation (1288-1291) the vicarage was taxed at £7 and the vicar not exceeding £1.³ In 1341 the ninth sheep, the ninth fleece, and the ninth lamb were valued at £8, and so sold to Mathew Raynewarde, Henry Dynonn, and William Caymys. Of fifteenths there were none.⁴ In Wolsey's valuation the vicarage was rated at £13 10s. 1d.,⁵ and in Bishop Veysey's of the following year, at £13 10s. 2½d.

The right of presentation to the vicarage was reserved in the Crown from the dissolution of the Priory of Bodmin until the grant of 1608-9, before mentioned, and the presentations to the benefice were made accordingly.

THE PARISH CHURCH.

The parish Church, which is situate in the highland district of the parish, is dedicated to St. Menefreda, one of the daughters of Brychan and sister of the patron saints of St. Endellion, St. Maben, and other neighbouring parishes. (See Plate XLVI.) According to the Bodmin Kalendar, St. Minefreda was commemorated on the 24th November. The edifice has recently been restored, and partially rebuilt upon the same plan, under the direction of Mr. J. P. St. Aubyn, at a cost of about £3370, largely at the expense of Mrs. Stephens of St. Minver House and Trewornan, the Inappropriate Rector.⁶ It consists of a sanctuary, disengaged, 11 ft. 9 in. by 17 ft. 9 in.; Chancel, 23 ft. 9 in. by 16 ft. 4 in.;

⁶ The restoration of this Church was commenced in 1870, by the late Vicar, the Rev. W. Hart Smith, through whose energy the two Chapels had already been restored. It was closed on the 19th April in that year, and was re-opened after the restoration of the fabric on Sexagesima Sunday, 1871. The seating and internal fittings were finished on 12th February, 1871, and the whole work, including the tower and spire and bells, being completed, the Church was formally re-opened for Divine Service on 12th September, 1875.

nave, 63 ft. 6 in. by 17 ft.: north transept, or Chapel, 11 ft. by 11 ft. 9 in.: north aisle, 52 ft. by 7 ft.: south aisle, continuous with the nave and Chancel, 88 ft. by 13 ft. 6 in.: south porch and tower with a spire.

The Chancel rises three steps above the nave, from which it was formerly divided by a very fine rood screen of oak carved and enriched in colours and gold. This was removed by Mr. Carlyon, when curate of this parish, in 1837, and it is hoped that it will, eventually, be replaced. A portion of it has been repaired and set up under the tower arch. The roodloft staircase was entered from the Chapel, but the lower steps have been cut away, though not recently. It opens into the chancel by a quadrangular door-way. Modern carved pareloses separate the chancel from the south aisle, the eastern bay of which has also been screened off for a vestry. The sanctuary rises two steps above the chancel, and the altar stands upon a foot pace. The steps are of granite, and the floors are paved with Minton's glazed tiles. There is a piscina of Second Pointed work in the south wall. An oaken shelf has been inserted in it to make it serve also for a credence. (See ground plan, Plate XLVII, Fig. 1.)

The Chancel is lighted by a new three-light window in the east wall, designed by Mr. St. Aubyn, which is filled with painted glass by O'Connor,¹ having the following inscription at the bottom.

"To the Glory of God and in Memory of Anne Sandys, aged 88 years, and her Daughter Lucy Sandys, aged 60 years, who both died March 1st 1867."

In the North wall, a two light window has also been inserted in lieu of an earlier window, and filled with painted glass. Below it, in the splay of the window, upon a brass label, is the following inscription: "This window is in Memory of William Sandys Sandys, Esquire, of Saint Minver House, who died October IX, MDCCXLVI, aged XXXVII years, also of Mary Anne Sandys, who died March XVII MDCCCXLIX aged XLIV years."

The north aisle is separated from the nave by an arcade of three massive octagonal columns of masonry with their responds, supporting pointed arches of the transition Norman period. The eastern bay has been converted into a Chapel. This is somewhat shorter than the bay, and is structurally divided from the aisle by a flying arch thrown against the spandrel of the arcade. The walls of this Chapel have been rebuilt, and it is lighted by a plain two light square headed window, of Third Pointed date, re-inserted in the east wall, and a three light new window in the north wall, designed by Mr. St. Aubyn, and resembling the east window of the Chancel. In the north wall of the aisle are three two light windows of Third Pointed style, 5 fo. and deeply cusped. The heads are new, the upper part of the wall having been rebuilt upon the old foundations. The north aisle, which is of seven bays, is separated from the chancel and nave by the usual Third Pointed pillars and arches of the Cornish type. Each bay, except the westernmost.

¹ This window replaces one with a wooden frame, which was inserted by Mr Sandys in 1811. That gentleman, in writing to Mr. Lysons in 1812, says: I last year beautified the Chancel of the Highland Church, with a window of painted glass by Blackler and Silk, a mahogany rail and floor of wood instead of stone, at a very considerable expense, and rebuilt a part of the walls. The painted glass here mentioned, which is not of an ecclesiastical character, was removed at the time of the restoration of the Church, and is now in the possession of Mrs. Stephens.

into which the porch door opens, has a three light window, the head of the centre light having a depressed arch, whilst those of the side lights are of the ogee form. At the east end of the aisle is a four light window of Third Pointed work. There is a Third Pointed Priest's door opening into the eastern bay, which has, externally, a square hood moulding.

The south porch is of Third Pointed date. The external doorway has an equilateral arch with hood moulding, but the internal door is of the Second Pointed period, having continuous mouldings of good character. Above it is an empty trefoiled arch.

The font, which stands in the western bay of the nave, opposite the north door, is octagonal in form, of Third Pointed work.

In the recent repairs of the Church, the tower and spire were found to be so insecure that it was thought necessary to take down the structure and rebuild it from the foundation. In the angle on the north side a lumber room had been erected, perhaps as early as 1682, as there was that date over the door. This has, very properly, been removed. The tower has a bold arch opening into the church, and a west window of three lights. The top of the new spire rises 115 ft. above the floor of the tower, and forms a conspicuous object at great distances.

The ancient stocks are preserved in the church.

THE BELLS.

In the Return of Plate and Bells appertaining to every parish Church within the Hundred of Trigg, in 1552, it is stated that the parishioners of St. Minver had a chalice and four bells in the tower.¹ The plate and bells of the Chapels of SS. Enodock and Michael are not included in the Return. The four bells of the parish Church were in 1727 recast into five, which, as appears from the terrier of 19th April of that year, had not then been re-hung, but whether in the recasting additional metal was used or not, we have no knowledge. Two of them had been again recast before the recent restoration of the Church when they bore the following inscriptions:—

1  PEACE & GOOD NEIGHBOURHOOD  I. P. 1814  [2 ft. 2 $\frac{3}{4}$ diam.]

2 PROSPERITY TO THIS PARISH 1727, [2 ft. 4 "]

3 PROSPERITY TO THE CHVRCH OF ENGLAND 1727 [2 ft. 4 "]

4 IH^O COLLINGS & IN^O BLAKE CHVRCHWARDENS. CALEB
BONEY FECIT. 1802 [2 ft. 7 $\frac{1}{2}$ "]

5 ROBT BLAKE & W^M WEBBER CHVRCHWARDENS. 1727. [2 ft. 10 $\frac{1}{2}$ "]

When the Church was restored, three of these bells, viz., the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th, were found to be cracked. These have now (1875) been recast with additional metal by Warner and Sons, London, and a ring of six bells has been hung in the new steeple. The new tenor weighs 9 cwt., and the note is A flat.

ALTAR PLATE.

It is stated in the terrier of 1727, that the weight of the Communion plate belonging to the parish Church was twenty-five ounces. We find now the following utensils: viz., a silver gilt chalice and cover, quite plain, the latter forming a paten, 11½ ins. in height. The Hall mark is of the year 1618-9, shewing it not to be the chalice mentioned in 1552. The maker's mark is F.W. in a circle.

A flagon, and a plate intended for a paten. The Hall mark of the flagon is of the year 1764, and it bears the following inscription: "The gift of M. Webber of St. Kew 1763. To the Parish of St. Minver." The plate bears this inscription: "✠ Ecclesiæ St. Minver D.D. Gul' Sandys, ejusdem A.M. A.D. 1791." It bears the Hall mark of 1723, and the maker's mark is E. G. in a lozenge with a dot over and below the letters.

The terrier of 1746 mentions the silver cup and cover, and a flagon and plate of pewter for the service of the Communion. The pewter vessels are not now found. There is, however, an alms dish of brass, of German workmanship.

About forty years ago a piece of ground on the north side of the Churchyard, called "the Bowling Green," was annexed to it for burial purposes. Mr. Sandys, in 1812, mentions that rude coffins, made of pieces of slate, had been found on this spot; and since its re-use as a burial place discoveries have been made of interments at a considerable depth, the skeletons being enclosed by stones set on edge in this manner: Δ. The ground was not re-consecrated when brought into use.

Since page 10 was printed, the Treglyne's cross, No. 43, has been set up in the Churchyard.

MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

John Jenkyns, who died in 1627; also of the Rev. Mr. Richard Kilbee of the City of Coventry, and nearly forty years minister of this Parish. He died in 1700, and lies here interred together with his wife and several children. Gilbert says there were also inscriptions ornamented with the armorial bearings of the Kempes. It should be remarked that Mr. Richard Kilbee was never Vicar of this Parish. He was instituted to the Rectory of Lanivet, 12th February 1662, and on 14th May 1674, was married at St. Mabyn to Mrs. Elizabeth Martyn. He continued to hold Lanivet until his death, in 1700.

Though brisk at morning we may dye at noon.

PARISH REGISTERS.

The old Registers of this parish consist of seven volumes. At first two were used contemporaneously, both of which are, generally, in good condition. One contains the baptisms, which commence in 1558 and extend to 1758. The entries are regularly made from the beginning to 21st August 1595, from which date to 6th October 1596, through some accident, there is a lapse. From the last mentioned date to 1645 the Register is complete, but from that date to 1651, few entries were made.¹ From 1651 to 1758 the Registers were regularly kept, but it should be borne in mind that the entries made by the Registrars appointed under the Ordinance of the House of Commons in 1653, are those of births not of baptisms. The other volume contains the record of marriages and burials. The entries of marriages begin in 1559 and are continued regularly to 1642, except for the period in 1595-6 referred to above. No further record was made until 1651 (except two entries in 1646 and a few in 1650). From 1651 to 1754 the Register is regularly kept. The entries of burials commence in 1558 and are continued to 1695, except in the years 1595-6, and from 1644 to 1650.

At the end of the second volume are: "Several things registered according to Order." The entries relate to Collections made in the parish under the authority of Letters Patent under the Great Seal, and Diocesan Briefs, for various objects of Charity: e.g., the rebuilding of Churches destroyed by fire or other accidents, the relief of persons suffering from losses from similar causes, redemption of captives, &c. It is noticed that in the Autumn of 1665, collections were made monthly for "persons and places visited by the plague," and that in the following year a collection was made "towards the supply of London whose great loss was occasioned by that dreadful fire which burnt the greatest part of the City." These entries extended from 1659 to 1671.

Some of the earliest names in the registers are: Merton, Hick,* Goode, Cater, Polstage, Godafray, Rounsavalle, Stephen, Guy,* Billing,* Kent,* Braben,* Jackett,* Morish, Stone,* Pettigrew, Trewince, Worthevale, Penkevill, Mabley,* Tenny, Hooper,* Shole and Moyle,* of which those marked thus * are still extant in St. Minver and adjoining parishes.

Vol. III. Is a vellum book containing entries of baptisms from 1758 to 1812.

Vol. IV. Is a paper book with limp covers, bound in vellum, and contains entries of burials from 1678 to 1748. The entries down to 17th March 1696 are the same as in Vol. II, with the addition of the record that certificates as to burials in woollen had been produced.

Vol. V. Is a vellum book containing entries of burials from 25th March 1748 to 5th November, 1812.

Vol. VI. Is a vellum book containing the entries of banns, and of marriages, from 1754 to 1787.

Vol. VII. Is a paper book of printed forms for banns and marriages and contains entries from 1787 to 1812, when the new Act came into force.

Some of the books require repair but they are generally in good condition.

A memorandum is made in the Register by the Rev. John Ellis, some 30 years ago curate of this parish, and now Vicar of St. Eval, that an old man had informed him that when he was young, water, for baptisms, was always brought from a never-failing well, in "Well Park," on the Glebe.

THE CHAPELS.

St. Guinedoc alias St. Enodoc. There are two ancient Chapels still remaining in this parish, both of which are in the lowlands district, and each about two and a quarter miles from the parish Church. They are situate near the margin of Padstow Harbour, and are one a half miles apart. Both, like the parish Church, have recently been "restored" through the indefatigable energy of the late Vicar, under the direction of Mr. St. Aubyn. We will first treat of the larger and more ancient, which is dedicated to St. Guinedoc or St.

Enodoc,¹ which is frequently called the "North Church." St. Guinedoc was commemorated here on the 24th July, the day of St. Christina the Virgin; but on the 16th September 1434, the Bishop granted his licence to the Vicar of Sancta Menefreda and the parishioners of the Chapel Curate (Capelle Curate) of "Sancti Guinedoci" upon the said parish Church dependent, to change the day of the feast of dedication of the Chapel from the day of St. Christina the Virgin to the 13th of the same month.² The festival of the Chapel is now kept on the Sunday nearest the feast of St. Michael and All Angels. On 4th October 1435, the Bishop granted a license to Richard Tomme, Vicar of St. Minver, to celebrate the Divine Offices himself, or by fit priests, in all the Chapels of his parish.³

The Chapel of St. Guinedoc is said to be of great antiquity. It is very near the Roman Station, and has been supposed to have been founded by that people in the third century. Until recently it was almost entirely buried with the drifted sand, and in a state of utter ruin, dampness, and decay. It was closed for restoration on 9th July 1863, and was re-opened on 21st July in the following year, and, at a cost of £675, raised (with the exception of the sum of £70 levied by a rate,) by voluntary contributions, and other means, not only has the venerable edifice been put into a state of thorough repair and made a picture of neatness and order, but the Chapel yard, which was previously unenclosed, has been protected by a stone fence all around.

This Chapel would appear to have been originally cruciform in plan, and probably of Norman date. The first alteration, or rather addition, was the erection of the tower and steeple on the north of the north transept in the First Pointed period, and, long subsequently, the construction of the south aisle, which absorbed the south transept. It now consists of a chancel, nave, north transept, south aisle, south porch, and tower of two low stages, surmounted by a somewhat stumpy broach spire, with a small rude trefoil-headed gabled window on each face. The Chancel, which is 20 ft. by 11 ft., rises one step from the nave, from which it was separated by an oaken screen of Third Pointed work, well carved, and very tastefully coloured and gilt, the bottom of which remains in situ in a perfectly sound condition, and has been repainted and regilded according to the original ¹ We have failed in our endeavour to identify St. Guinedoc. It was suggested by the late Dr. Oliver that probably, he was the same who, under the name of St. Guidenocus, is commemorated in Bretagne on the 3rd November, or that he was identical with the famous Scotch Bishop, St. Guinochus, Councillor to King Kenneth II., who died A.D. 838. We think it more likely that St. Guinedoc was an Irish or Welsh Saint, whose history is at present unknown to modern Hagiologists.

² Bishop Lacy's Reg., vol. iii, fo. 107 b. The words of the record are: "predictus Dominus concessit licenciam vicario Sancte Menefrede in Cornubie et parochianis Capelle Curate Sancti Guinedoci ab ecclesia parochiali Sancte Menefrede predicta dependentis." The term parishioners in this document does not mean, or infer, that this Chapel was a separate parish, for it is specifically stated that the Chapel was dependent upon the parish Church of St. Menefreda. The same description occurs, in even a stronger form, in a document, dated in 1390, relating to the Chapel of St. Constantine within the parish of St. Meryn, in which the inhabitants of the Chapelry petitioned the Bishop of Exeter to compel the Vicar of St. Meryn to perform certain offices within the said Chapel, as had been accustomed. The inhabitants are said to be distinct parishioners: "ex parte parochianorum Capelle Sancti Constantini parochiam et parochianos distinctos habentis infra fines et limites parochie Ecclesie Sancte Marine.....et ab eadem notorie dependentis." Bishop Brentingham's Reg. vol. i, 206.

ornamentation. The altar is elevated three steps above the Chancel. There is, on the south side, a bracket piscina, which, from its height, shews that the floor of the sanctuary has been considerably lowered. On the north side is a recessed credence with a projecting shelf; this was formerly an aumbry. The Chancel is lighted by a Third Pointed three-light trefoil east window, with tracery in the head. The nave is 35 ft. by 10 ft., and is lighted by a First Pointed two-light trefoil window, with a quatre-foil in the head, cut in the solid stone, at the west end, which was rebuilt;¹ and a small new window on the south side, which replaced a lancet, deeply splayed. (See Plate XLIX., and Ground Plan Plate XLVII., fig. 2.)

The south aisle is of three bays of Third Pointed work, and separated from the nave and Chancel by columns and arches of the usual Cornish type in that style. This aisle measures 19 ft. by 13 ft., and is divided from the Chancel by a modern screen. It is lighted by a small two-light cinque-foil window in each bay, with square external hood moulding, and a three-light window at the east end, filled with good modern painted glass. The north transept rises two steps above the floor of the nave. It has a small single light tre-foil window of First-Pointed date in the east wall, and there is a similar window in the north wall of the tower. When the Church was restored, a circular bowl of catacluse stone, supposed to have been a benatura, was found in the tower, and was converted into an alms box.

The font stands opposite the north door. It is of the Norman, or Transition Norman, style, having a round bowl. The shaft consists of a large cable moulding, standing upon a splayed foot.

According to the terrier 1680 (see ante p. 16), this Chapel possessed a glebe of four acres of land, but this probably refers to the site of Jesus Chapel. And the terrier of 1727 (ibid.) states that it had then a right of common "without any stint."

We find in the Bishop's Registry the following interesting inventory of the goods, &c., of this Chapel. It is neither signed nor dated, but the date may safely be ascribed either to 1607 or 1613.

¹ It was found in the recent restorations, that the west wall was in a very unsafe condition, and upon examination it was discovered that it was literally "built upon the sand." The Church represented an earlier structure, or, at some time, would seem to have been lengthened. The eastern part rests upon the solid rock which indeed formed the floor of the sanctuary, and not being even, the two back legs of the holy table were cut shorter than the front to admit of its standing level. The rock, towards the west end, shelved rapidly westwards, and the wall was built upon flat stones resting upon the sand. It was found necessary to excavate to a depth of eleven feet to obtain a foundation, and in doing so it was discovered that three tiers of interments, one above the other, had taken place beneath the west wall of the Church, the lower one being on the solid rock, the skeleton being enclosed with stones as before described.

ALTAR PLATE.

There is a chalice now in the possession of Mr. John Mably of Trebederick, in whose family it is stated to have been for many years, which is, undoubtedly, the chalice belonging to this Chapel. Probably one of Mr. Mably's ancestors was Churchwarden, and thus became possessed of it, and it has not been restored to the Chapel. It is of silver with a cover, serving as a paten, and stands nine inches in height. An engraved border, in arabesque style, surrounds it just below the rim, and in form, character, and ornamentation, it is almost identical with the chalice belonging to the Chapel of St. Michael, presently to be described. It is probably of about the weight of that mentioned in the terrier of 1727, viz., nine ounces. It has no inscription nor Hall mark upon it. With the exception of the abovementioned there is no altar plate belonging to the Chapel.

BELLS.

Neither of the two bells mentioned in the above Terrier now remains. One of them is said to have been an ancient bell, inscribed "ALFREDVS REX," and tradition says, it was sold to the parishioners of St. Eval or of St. Ervan.¹

Chapel of St. Michael, Porthilly. This Chapel is sometimes called the "South Chapel." It was the second of the three Churches re-edified by the late Vicar, and was closed for that purpose on 29th September 1865, and re-opened on Ascension Day (30th May) 1867. The cost of its restoration was £514, the money being raised by voluntary contributions, and a small rate. It consists of a Chancel 15 ft. by 13 ft., south Chancel aisle 15 ft. by 6 ft. 6 in., nave 31 ft. 6, by 13 ft., south transept, or Chapel, 16 ft. by 11 ft., and south porch, which, in the recent alterations, has been converted into a small tower with a saddle back roof, the external gable of which is surmounted by a granite Latin cross, erected by the late Mary Prideaux-Brune, of Prideaux Place, Padstow, in memory of her friend Lucy Sandys of St. Minver, as testified by a brass plate erected within the porch. In the recent alterations a small vestry on the north side of the Chancel was added. (See Plate L., and Ground Plan Plate XLVII., fig. 3.)

The Chancel, the north wall of which orientates several degrees to the south, is lighted by an eastern window of three lights, that in the centre, quatrefoil, and those of the sides plain ogee. It is filled with good painted glass, having the following inscription at the bottom:

"To the Glory of God and in grateful remembrance of Anna & Lucy Sandys this window is erected by the Parish of Saint Minver, A.D. 1867."

There is a Second-Pointed piscina in the south wall, and a small recessed credence has been constructed in the north wall. The Chancel is raised one step above the floor of the nave, from which it is separated by a substantial carved oak screen of the Third-Pointed period.

In the Chapel, or transept, is a trefoiled headed piscina of Second Pointed work, in the east wall, the basin of which has been cut off flush with the wall, though not recently. This Chapel is lighted by a small lancet in the east wall, and by a window in the south wall like that in the Chancel before described.

The font is of the Norman transition period, very similar to that at St. Enodoc, the chief difference being that it stands on a square plinth.

The burial ground has been recently enlarged by the gifts of small pieces of land from several persons and by a small piece recovered from the sea, which is protected from further incursion by the erection of a sea wall, of a very simple and effective character, planned by the late Vicar. The wall is 150 feet in length.

In the Bishop's Registry is an Inventory for this Chapel, similar to that printed above for St. Gwenedock.

ALTAR PLATE.

The altar plate, now belonging to this Chapel, consists of, a small chalice and cover of silver, the latter forming a paten. $8\frac{1}{2}$ inches high. Like that of St. Guinedoc, which in other respects it closely resembles. It has no Hall mark. Below the rim and around the foot are borders engraved in arabesque, which would seem to justify its being assigned to the early part of the seventeenth century. The top of the cover is engraved in a later style. In the centre, within a foliated opening, is the date 1711, and on a border "PERDILLE" being the local pronunciation of Porthilly. It is probably the chalice mentioned in the above inventory.

Jesus's Chapel and Well. Upon the manor of Penmayne, about half a mile north of Rock, on the left of the road leading to St. Minver Church, is an ancient enclosed tenement, containing about four acres, called "Chapel." A small Chapel existed here until recent times. Mr. Sandys, writing in 1812, states that he had seen pieces of a Gothic window on the spot, but no remains are now to be found. It, probably, had not any special endowment, for we do not find any notice of it in the Certificates of the Commissioners under the Act for suppressing Chuntries, Colleges, &c. In 1553 "Jesus Chapel" was let to William Caveil, Gent.,¹ for a term of seven years, at the annual rent of 12d. Soon afterwards, however, it was taken, in common, by all the tenants of the Manor, and we would fain hope, used for religious purposes, as the tenants continued to take it at every assession, in the same manner, down to the year 1718,² but at the following assession, in 1731,³ the note "not taken" is set against it, and it afterwards disappears from the Rolls. The enclosure was used as a burial ground. In 1778, in consequence of the shifting of the sand, many coffins of slate were exposed, formed in a singular manner, and a quantity of human remains, teeth, &c., with many personal ornaments, rings, &c., with English coins extending from Henry I. to Elizabeth, were found. The human remains were interred by Mr. Sandys in the Churchyard.⁴

Near the abovementioned Chapel, in a north-west direction, is an ancient Holy Well, called "Jesus's Well." It possessed a fine spring, the waters of which were believed to have great healing qualities. People came from long distances to pay their devotions and use the waters, which were celebrated for many cures, and for the evils which befel scoffing unbelievers. Its virtues continued to late years. No longer ago than 1867, Mary Cranwell (the wife of a boatman, named Patrick Cranwell, since deceased⁵), who for a considerable period had suffered severely from erysipelas, and could obtain no relief from medical treatment, fully believing, as she stated to the author, from the repute of the well, that if she bathed in the water with faith she would be cured of her disease, went to the place, and kneeling beside the well,⁶ recited the "Litany to the Holy Name of Jesus," and bathed the diseased parts in the waters. She received relief from the first application, and repeating it the prescribed number of three times, at intervals, she became perfectly whole, and has never since suffered from the same malady. Whether this remarkable cure which as a fact is fully verified, arose from any curative qualities in the waters, or was the result of the poor woman's faith, we will not venture to say. Unfortunately the properties of the water cannot now be tested, inasmuch as the farmer who occupies the land, not knowing, or, probably, not believing in, its virtues has, since the abovementioned circumstance, cut a drain to the spring and intercepted the flow of water. There is a small building, of some antiquity, over the well, having a doorway with a two centred arch, consisting of three stones, but it is now much out of repair.

Chapels at Trevellor and Roserowe. Hals says that "at Trevilla, alias Trevelva, there is yet extant an ancient free Chapel for Divine Service, kept in good repair by the Lord of this place, furnished with an old English Bible heretofore made use of in this Chapel;" and the Rev. William Sandys, writing to Lysons in 1812, says: "There were anciently a great number of Chapels in this parish. A part of one at Roserowe, I remember standing, now converted into a corn chamber, and a part of another still remains at Trevelver."² This Lysons has embodied in his "Magna Britannia." We have not, however, found in the Bishops' Registers at Exeter, the record of a single licence for the celebration of the divine offices in either of these Chapels, nor any reference whatever to them.

CHARITIES.

Randall's Charity. John Randall of St. Just, in co. Cornwall, Esq., who died in 1733, by his will, dated 4th October 1727, bequeathed to the Vicar of St. Minver the sum of 10s. annually, for preaching a funeral sermon in the parish Church on the feast of St. John the Evangelist, and the sum of 20s. annually, to be distributed by the Minister, Churchwardens, and Overseers, to poor widows and fatherless children of St. Minver that do not receive parochial relief, and be made such sums chargeable upon his tenement called Mismeer in this parish,³ for the term of 1000 years. The estate of Maesmere now belongs to Mrs. Stephens of St. Minver House, by whom the sums in question are duly paid, and they are distributed by the Vicar according to the terms of the bequest, he preaching the sermon as appointed.

Hambly's Charity. Richard Hambly, in 1768, gave a sum of £5 per annum, for the benefit of the poor, but as it was chargeable upon a leasehold estate called Gliddon's Tenement, the charity has now become extinct. One of the lives on the lease was still living, though upwards 80 years of age, in 1838.¹

Darell's Charity. Mrs. Sarah Darell by her will, in 1760, bequeathed the sum of £200, the interest to be given to poor housekeepers of the parish, not receiving parochial relief; and she appointed the Vicar of the parish, and the owner of Trewornau for the time being, Trustees of the charity. The money is now invested in 3 per Cent. Consols, and produces £9 19s. 2d. annually, which is distributed as appointed by the aforesaid will.

Profitt's Charity. Helen Profitt, daughter of John Lynam of Cant, who died in 1780, by her will gave £5 a year to be paid out of her estate at Porthilly, for the remainder of a term of 1000 years, and appointed Philip Kent, his heirs and executors, trustees for the distribution of the same to the use of the poor of the Lowland of St. Minver who do not receive parochial relief.² In 1837, the charity was distributed by Mr. Simon Woolcock, as trustee, assisted by the Churchwardens. Porthilly was subsequently purchased by the late William Sandys Sandys of St. Minver House, Esq^r. who ceased to pay the £5 per annum to the poor, but the value is now given to the poor in coals, as it has been for more than twenty years past, by Mrs. Stephens of Trewornan, who at present holds the estates.

SCHOOLS.

The only elementary School in the parish, except two private, or dame Schools, is situate at Tredrissick. It will accommodate 150 children, and it is said there is not a sufficient number in the parish to fill it. It is in union with the National Society for the education of the poor in the principles of the Church of England, and is under Government inspection.

MANOR OF PENMAYNE, alias POLMEANE.

The manor of Penmayne, sometimes written Polmeane, is an ancient manor, though we have not been able to identify it in Domesday. It escheated to the crown in the time of Henry III, on account of the Norman wars, but from whom there is no record.

King Henry gave it to his brother Richard, King of the Romans,¹ who annexed it to the manor of Helston in Trigg. Earl Edmund died of it so seized in 1300, at which time the hamlet of Penmayn, as it is described, had thirty-nine free tenants, who paid annually 115s. 6d., and for aid 2s. 11d.² In the Caption of Seizin of Edward the Black Prince only thirty-seven years later, the number of free tenants had become reduced to seven, and the rent they rendered to 18s. 2½d., whilst the total annual value of the manor was 111s. 9½d. only. From what cause, or in what manner, the manor became so reduced we cannot with certainty say.

The following is the description of the manor as shewn in the caption of seizin:

It is remarkable that divers lands in St. Minver, which would naturally belong to the manor of Penmayne, in the seventeenth century were held as free tenements of the manor of Bliston, e.g., Porthilly, Trevigoe, Treglyne, Trebederock, Smith's Tenement, Gouvena, and Portquin. In the Ministers' Accounts of the Duchy of Cornwall for the year 1352, Nicholas Kernek, Prepositus for the manor of Helston in Trigg, under which head, at that date, the receipts and expenditure of the manor of Penmayne were brought to account, did not account for the profits of that manor, because the King had granted it, together with the manors of Moreske and Tywarnhaile, to Sir Walter de Wodeland, Knight, for the term of his life.¹ The grant, however, does not appear in the Prince's Council Book until the following year, under the 5th June, in which it is stated that the grant was made for Sir Walter Wodeland's services, and to enable him to maintain his dignity; and to be to him for life, free of rent, and to his heirs in tail, at the rent of 100 marks per annum.²

Sir Walter Wodeland died about 1373, s.p., when the manors which he held reverted to the Duke, and in that year the profits of the manor of Penmayne are accounted for by Thomas Lucas, Prepositus there, for the first time in a separate form. In that year they amounted to: Rents of Assize 17s. 11d., Conventiary Rents £4 2s. 6d., Fines 11s., part of 44s. arrears of 66s. of divers fines paid within six years, perquisites of Courts 35s. 8d., total £7 7s. 3d.¹

By Letters Patent dated 20th January 1397-8, King Richard granted to his beloved Esquire (Esquire of the Body) John Cheynduyt, in consideration of his good services, for the term of his life, the Manor of Penmayne to the extent of the value of 100s. per annum, he to answer to the crown for the surplus profits, if any; and by the same Patent the King also granted him, for the like term, 100s. out of the profits of the Hundred of Triggeshire.² This grant was confirmed by King Henry V., by Letters Patent dated 11th June 1413,³ but it appears from the Minister's Accounts of 1st King Henry VI. (1423) that the last named Sovereign had not yet confirmed it.⁴ John Cheynduyt, however, died in December 1426,⁵ when the Manor again reverted to the Crown, and we have no evidence that it was afterward granted out. The profits of the Manor were regularly accounted for in the time of Queen Elizabeth. For the year 1606 we find the following Court Roll of the Manor.⁶

From this date the manor has remained in the hands of the Dukes of Cornwall, or Sovereigns of England, for the time being, the tenants holding by the customary tenures of the assessionable manors, until 1844, when they were enfranchised under the arrangement referred to ante,¹ the Duke only retaining the minerals, the rabbit-warren, the common of Spire, and the ferry.

THE FERRY OF BLACKTOR alias BLACK-ROCK alias ROCK.

The ferry across Padstow Harbour has, from time immemorial, been parcel of the manor of Penmayne. It derives its name from a hill whose black head, consisting of greenstone, protrudes through the sand on the St. Minver side of the water, and has given its name of Rock, or Black Rock to the little village adjoining. In 1337, the passage, or ferry, was held in convention, in common, by the tenants of the manor at the annual rent of 13s. At the assession in 1469, John Bussell and John Rawlyn, freemen, took the passage of the lord there, called Blaktor, which John Corvesor and his fellows took at the previous assession, at the annual rent of 8s., and contracted that the passage boat should be well and sufficiently kept in repair, and that if the boat afterwards chanced to be broken, they would new build the said boat.¹ In 1574 Henry Moile took the passage at the rent of 12s.,² and in 1588 a moiety was held by Henry Moile, son of John Moile, son of Henry Moile, and the other moiety by William Bilkey on the surrender of Cormack Dier at the same rent.³ In 1617 it was taken by Henry Moile and Thomas Bilkey in moieties.⁴ In 1735 Charles Guy, Clerk, in his own right, held one moiety, and Humphry Arthur, upon the surrender of Brightwell James, after the death of Jane Hodge, widow, her aunt, held the other moiety, at the rent of 12s., and 12d. new rent, upon the same conditions as before stated.⁵ At the following assession, Mary Parkyn, widow, held a moiety by the surrender of Charles Guy, and the same parties held the other moieties as before;⁶ and at the next assession, it was taken by Joseph Peters, by surrender of Ann Arthur, by surrender of Mary Parkyn, widow, for one moiety, and Joseph Peters, by surrender of Humphry Arthur, for the other moiety.⁷ In 1756, both moieties were held by Elizabeth Peters, after the death of Joseph Peters her husband.⁸ In the arrangement of 1844 referred to (Hist. of Trigg Minor, vol. ii, p. 293) the ferry was reserved to the Lord of the Manor, and is now let, on yearly tenancy, at the annual rent of £12, and it pays rates and taxes to the parish of St. Minver.

Rabbit Warren. There has been a Rabbit Warren on the manor from a very remote period. In 1457, the Warrenna Caniculorum was rented by Sir John Colshill at 6s. 8d. per annum, and it was afterwards taken, in convention, at the same rent, by the Prepositus, in the name of the tenants, and it continued to be held in the same manner by the Prepositus, for the time being, at the same rent, for a very considerable period, together with the pasture of the waste of Spire. It is now held in convention by Mr. — Thomas, who has built for himself a cottage at the foot of Bray Hill within the Warren.

Free Warren. In 1595, Maximilian Cock took the right of Free Warren over the Manor, or a license for fishing, hunting, hawking, and taking flying animals at the rent of 12d. per annum, paying a fine of 6d., sureties Thomas Sparnall and Charles Brabant.⁹ At the following Assession it was taken by William Roscarrock at the same rent. have no further Assession Roll until 1683, when it was taken by the Prepositus in the name of all the tenants.¹ It continued to be so held for a considerable time, but in 1724, Robert Corker took it as he had done before.² In 1731, John Cock, Esq., took it at the same rent, to hold during the pleasure of the Prince, and held it for some time.³ In 1812, it was held by the Rev. William Sandys for the term of his life, but it is not now let.

Quarry. It may be worthy of remark that in 1468, John Lovebond, Clerk, obtained a license to have stones from the Lord's quarry near Penmayne.⁴ This was no other than the famous Vicar of Egloshayle, who built Wade-bridge and rebuilt the Church of Eglos-hayle. (See his device, Hist. of Trigg Minor, vol. i, p. 418, and Plate XV, fig. 3.)

MANOR OF TREWORNAN.

This was an ancient manor, though we fail to discover much of its early history. It is a member of the manor of Amel, under which, doubtless, it was taxed in Domesday (Hist. of Trigg Minor, vol. ii., 124). Our earliest notice of it is in 1211, when Richard son of Robert de Polglas accounted for half a mark as written in the Great Roll, that Stephen the son of Ralph le Bret de Treuarnian came into the Exchequer, and before the Barons sold and quit-claimed to the said Richard and Philomena his wife, and his heirs by the said Philomena, all the right which he had or could have in the land of Treuarnian, with appurtenances, which land belonged to Ralph the father of the said Stephen, in men's and houses, rents and meadows, and pastures, in waters and mills, and pools and woods, and plain, without reservation for ever; and that the same Richard, for this sale and quit-claim, shall give the same Stephen one mark of silver.⁵ According to the return made to the Justices Itinerant at Launceston, 12th Edward I., Trewornan consisted of eighteen Cornish acres.⁷

In 21st Edward I. (1293) Benedict le Brun held one acre of land in Trewornan, and one carucate Cornish by military service, and payment of one penny at the feast of St. Michael.⁸ This was, probably, the same land. We find Trewornan mentioned as a Tithing, which shews that it was a manor, in 1302.⁹ In certain proceedings at the assizes at

Launceston, in 1344, it was pleaded that Ralph de Trenorman was seized of a free tenement in Trewornan juxta Rosynynmur, and that by his charter, dated at Trewornan on Tuesday next after the feast of S. Luke the Evangelist 15th Edward III. (1341) he settled it upon himself for life, with remainder to the heirs of his body, in default remainder to Thomas de Trewornon (probably a brother) and the heirs of his body. Ralph died seized, s.p., and Richard his brother and heir entered into possession, but was disseized by the aforesaid Thomas, who claimed under the Charter. Richard brought his action to recover. The issue was postponed, and we know not how it was determined.¹

On the death of Sir John Danney, Knt., on 3rd August 1346, it was found upon inquisition, that among the Fees held by him was one Knights' fee in Trewornan, of the value of 40^s per annum.² And on the death of Edward, Prince of Wales, it was found, upon inquisition, that the heirs of Roger Inkepenne held of the Castle of Trematon four Knights' fees with appurtenances in Halton, Nodetorre, Trewornan, and Tremure, the value of which was £20.³

The land, however, in 1359 formed part of the possessions of the family of Cowlyng. In that year John Cowlyng of Trewornan, and Johanna his wife, levied a fine of Peter Burland, whereby they settled three messuages and three ferlings of land in Hendre juxta Tremethoubyhan, and Relonbys juxta Trewyla, upon themselves for life, remainder upon John the son of John Cowlyng and the heirs of his body, in default, remainder to the right heirs of the said Johanna.⁴ It seems to have continued in the family of Cowlyng for a considerable period, for two centuries later, in 1557, John Cowlyng, Esq., suffered a fine in the manor of Trewornan and the manor of Trengwaynton to John Thomas, by which these manors were settled upon the said John Cowlyng for life, remainder to Richard Cowlyng son and heir apparent of the said John, and the heirs males of his body, in default, remainder to John Cowlyng, jun., brother of the said Richard, and to the heirs males of his body, in default, remainder to the right heirs of the aforesaid John Cowlyng, senior.⁵

In 1565, Richard Cowling, Gent., suffered a fine in the said Manors to Geoffrey Cowling, Gent., in the consideration of the sum of £150,⁶ and in 1568, Geoffry Cowlyng executed a feoffment, inter alia, of the manor of Trewornan to Dame Elizabeth Courteney, relict of Sir Peter Courteney of Ugbrooke, whose daughter, Dorothy, married a Cowling, and by deed dated 31st March 26th Elizabeth (1584) Geoffry Cowlyng, described as of Chudleigh, Gent., conveyed to the said Dame Elizabeth Courteney, "all that his manor of Trewornan, or called or known by the name of the manor of Trewornan, within the parish of St. Minver, situated in Trewornan, Kerowe, and St. Minver," to be held by the said

Dame Elizabeth of the Chief Lord of the fee by the services due and accustomed.¹ In 1592, Dame Elizabeth Courteney executed a settlement, inter alia, of the manor of Trewornan, in favour of her grandson Henry Clifford, son of Anthony Clifford of Birscombe, co. Wilts, by Ann daughter of Sir Peter Courteney, and a fine was levied in which the said Henry was querist and Dame Elizabeth deforciant, to confirm the same.² Trewornan soon afterwards passed to Simon Clifford, younger brother of Henry, who, in 1603, granted a lease of the barton for three lives to William Bodleigh of Dunsecombe, co. Devon, and in 1610 he granted the manor to his brother Thomas Clifford. By Indenture dated 15th July 1619, William Bodleigh assigned his lease to Thomas Bodley his son, who also acquired the fee simple of the manor, for by deed dated 20th September 1619, in consideration of the sum of £1450, he granted the manor of Trewornan, and the capital messuage barton and farm to John Rowe of Cadley, co. Devon, Gent., to hold to the said John Rowe, his heirs and assigns for ever; and at the same time a fine was levied, in which John Rowe, Gent., was querist and Thomas Clifford, s.t.p., and Ann his wife, and Thomas Bodley, Esq., and Blanche his wife were defendants, by which they quitclaimed the said manor and lands to the said John Rowe for ever.³

John Rowe, or Roe as he was afterwards called, adhered to the King in the troubles of the seventeenth century and his estates were consequently sequestrated, but he was allowed to compound for the same in March 1648, under the articles of Truro, and paid a fine of £537 7s. Two years afterwards he complained that, notwithstanding that he had fully satisfied his fine, an entry had been made and his demesne hands at Trewornan ploughed up by the authority of the sequestrators, and he claimed relief.⁴

John Roe died 6th March 1667-8, having by his will, dated 2nd January preceding, devised to his "cousin Thomas Darell of London, Gent., being the eldest son of my eldest sister Mary Travies, late wife of Richard Travies of London, merchant, all my mansion house capital messuage and demesne lands called Trewornan, and all my other messuages, manors, &c," for life, remainder to Thomas Darell son of the said Thomas and the heirs of his body, in default, remainder to the right heirs of the said Thomas, the father, for ever.⁵

In 1665 Thomas Darell, senr., and Thomas Darell, junr., Gent., and Elizabeth his wife, suffered a fine to Henry Beeston. Doctor of Laws, and Henry Travies, Gent., in this manor, and the manors of Trethewy, Tresarrett, Alternon, and St. Issy;⁶ and in 1677, they suffered another fine to the same parties, both for purposes of settlement.⁷ Thomas Darell, the elder, was Sheriff of Cornwall in 1666, and died in 1698. The estates, eventually, devolved upon his grandson, Henry Darell, who died in 1705, intestate, and owing considerable sums of money, leaving Henry Darell his son and heir aged ten years, and a daughter, Frances, aged seven years. Another daughter, named Ann, was born after his death. In 5th Anne (1706) an Act of Parliament was obtained for the sale of some part of his estate, and for leasing and mortgaging other parts, for raising money to pay his debts, and making provision for his widow and younger children. An exception, however, was made with respect to such of the demesne lands in St. Minver, St. Endellion, and St. Kew, as were not on lease at the time of the death of the said Henry Darell, in which Trewornan was included, and John Arscott of Tetcott, Anthony Nicoll of Penvose, Esqs., and Edward Trelawny of Southill, Clerk, were appointed trustees for carrying out the purposes of the Act.

Henry Darell, the younger, died in 1731 s.p., leaving his two sisters his heirs. Frances who married John Crabb of Plymouth, and Ann, who became the wife of the Rev. Edward Stephens, Vicar of St. Kew. Trewornan, under the will of her brother, devolved upon the former, who left an only son, Darell Crabb, who upon inheriting the estates of Coldrinnick upon the death of Henry St. George Darell, under the will of Charles Trelawny of Coldrinnick, Esq., who died in 1764 unmarried, had assumed the name and arms of Trelawny. Upon his death in 1795, also s.p., the estates passed to his kinsmen, Edward and Darell Stephens, grandsons of the Rev. Edward Stephens and Ann Darell. Edward the elder had the Coldrinnick estates under the will of the said Charles Trelawny, and assumed the name and arms of Trelawny only, whilst Darell, under the will of the said Darell Crabb Trelawny, inherited Trewornan, which is now possessed by his eldest surviving son and heir, Edward Stephens, Esq.

ROSOROW alias ROSERROWE.¹

This place in the first half of the sixteenth century was in the possession, and was the residence, of the family of Pernekvill, acquired probably by marriage with the heiress of Rayneward. We do not find any one of the name of Rayneward nor of Penkevill assessed in St. Minver to the Subsidy in 1524,² but Philip Penkevill was assessed upon lands of the value of £7 per annum in 1558.³ Soon after 1628, Rosorowe was alienated to the family of Carew of Antony, who made it their occasional residence. Alexander Carew was residing in St. Minver as early as 1635, as shewn by the Parochial Registers,⁴ and he was assessed to the Subsidy there on lands in 1641.⁵ In 1655, Charles Peters of St. Minver, yeoman, granted to Dame Jane Carew, widow, of Rosorowe,⁶ messuages called

This would appear to have been a mortgage.¹ From Alexander Carew, who succeeded his father as second baronet, and was beheaded on Tower Hill 23rd December 1644 "for adhering to the king and betraying his trust," Roserrow descended to Sir Coventry Carew, the sixth Baronet, who, dying in 1748, by his will devised, inter alia, the mansion house and barton of Rosorowe to Dame Mary Carew, his wife, for life, with remainder to his cousin Jonathan Rashleigh of Menabilly, by whose son and successor it was sold to the late Sir William Lemon, Bart, with whose estates it descended to Colonel Tremayne of Carclew, the present possessor. Roserrow contains 196 acres. The old mansion at Roserrow has been converted into a farm house, but some portion of the ancient walls and the expansive kitchen chimney yet remain, and also the moulded oak joists of the ceiling of the hall. It is said there was formerly a Chapel attached to it. The late Mr. Sandys, in a letter to Lysons, dated in 1812, says it was then converted into a corn-chamber, but that he remembered a part of it standing.² We can find no trace of a Chapel among the old buildings.

CANTA alias CANT.

Cant gave name to an ancient family called de Cant, de Kant, and de Kent. According to the return made before the Justices Itinerant at Launceston, 12th Edward I., Canta contained one and a half Cornish aeres.³ Bartholomew de Canta held half a Knight's fee in Canta in 1301, when the aid was levied upon the marriage of the King's eldest daughter,⁴ and he was assessed to the subsidy in St. Minver in 1327,⁵ and in 1346, when the aid was granted for making the King's eldest son a Knight, Benedict de Canta paid the aid for half a fee in Canta which Bartholomew, his father, had held before. We do not know when Cant passed out of this name, but not long after the last mentioned date Margery Hokisham, probably the heir of de Cant, was seized, inter alia, of Canta, and by her charter gave it to Bartholomew Berkeley and the heirs of his body, and from him it descended to Benedict his son, who was living in 1354. In that year Benedict Bercele levied a fine of Henry Dynan of twenty messuages, &c., in Kanta, Porthillieglos, Carlythian, and other lands, whereby they were settled upon the said Benedict for life, remainder to Thomas, son of William Cheynduit and Margaret his wife, and the heirs of their bodies.

¹ By deed dated 25th March 2nd James II., Charles Peters of St. Minver, Gent., mortgaged to Sir John Carew of East Antony, Treglines and Trevanger, and by a further deed dated 13th September 1712, reciting the last mentioned deed, William Peters of St. Minver, son and heir of John Peters of St. Minver, deceased, who was son and heir of Charles Peters deceased, surrendered to Sir William Carew of East Antony, Bart., son and heir of Sir John Carew, Bart., deceased, for a nominal sum, the equity of redemption in the said lands.

in default, remainder to the right heirs of the said Benedict.¹ Benedict died seized of it, when it descended to Johanna his daughter and heir, who carried it in marriage to John Cheynduit of Bodanan, whose son and heir, John Cheynduit, died in 1446 s.p.,² but he had a bastard son, named Richard, who died s.p., and a daughter Johanna, who married John Pengelly. Upon the death of John Cheynduit, his kinsmen Ralph Trenewith and Thomas Roscarrock were found to be his heirs,³ and in the partition of the estates Cant and Porthilly-Eglos were taken by the former. John Trenewith, grandson of Ralph, died in 1496 leaving four daughters, his coheirs, of whom Phillippa, the second, married John Carminow, and inherited Cant and Porthilly. By her charter, as Phillippa Carminow, widow, she granted the manor of Cant, and one messuage and one hundred acres of land in Porthilly-Eglos, and other lands and tenements, to John Pengelly of Bodmin,⁴ doubtless the same who is mentioned above, or his son, to hold to him and the heirs of his body, and in default of such issue to revert to the said Phillippa and her heirs. In 1491 John Pengelly took proceedings in Chancery against Phillippa Carminow and Nicholas Carminow, (son of Phillippa) to recover the evidences and writings relating to the said manor and lands in Porthilly-Eglos, which evidences the said Phillippa claimed the right to hold on account of her reversionary interest, and because they related also to the manor of Tremore, which she held. Nicholas Carmynow answered that the said John Pengelly and one Ede Jenyn were seized of the lands in question by the grant of one Phillippa Carmynow, widow, to them jointly, and to the heirs of the body of the said John Pengelly, reversion to the said Phillippa and her heirs.⁵ In 1512 the Minister of the Duchy of Cornwall accounted for the profits of the lands of John Pengelly in Cant and Tremore, which were in the King's hands by reason of the idiotey of the said John, having been seized by Peter Edgecombe and Peter Bevill, by virtue of a Commission under the seal of Arthur late Prince of Wales. In the Return of 1521-3 (Appendix III) John Pengelly's name appears as holding lands in St. Minver of the value of £6 per annum, being the largest estate in the parish except that of Sir Henry Courtenay. His lands, however, continued in the King's hands for the abovementioned cause; but we find that in 1539,⁶ John Pengelly held Carlythen of the manor of Bernier, which Benedict Cant, and, afterwards, John Pengelly had held.⁷

Whether Cant, at this early date, was already divided into two tenements, or whether the issue of the body of John Pengelly of Bodmin, the grantee, ceased, which is very likely, and the estate reverted to the family of Carmynow, we cannot undertake to say; but in 1573 John Carmynow (grandson of Phillippa,) and Oliver Carmynow (his son and heir) suffered a fine to John Mithew in eighty acres of land, twenty acres of meadow, and twenty acres of pasture in Cant alias Kanta, in St. Minver;⁸ and in 1594 Oliver Carminow, Esq.,

and Jewell Carminow, Gent. (his brother), suffered a fine to Nicholas Flamank, Esq., of one messuage, two gardens, forty acres of land, four acres of meadow, forty acres of pasture, and twelve acres of furze and heath in Cant.¹ These fines were probably for purposes of settlement. Nicholas Flamank was the nephew of the said Oliver and Jewell, and, in January 1595-6, John Carminow suffered a recovery in one messuage in Cant to John Lynam.²

In a list of fees, dated in 1619, it is stated that Richard Lynam (who was son and heir of the aforesaid John) held Cant in St. Minver of the crown,³ and in 1659 Richard Lynam, Gent., suffered a fine to Thomas Blake, Gent, in two messuages, one garden, sixty acres of land, five acres of meadow, eighty acres of pasture, and twenty acres of furze and heath, with appurtenances in Cant, alias Cant Denys, in St. Minver.⁴ This however, was only for purposes of settlement, for West Cant remained in the family of Lynam until after the death of John Lynam of Cant., Gent., s.p., who by his will, dated 22nd October 1751, and proved in the Archdeaconry Court of Cornwall on 19th October 1791, devised East Cant, of which he held a lease of the Earl of Radnor, to Christina his wife for her life with remainder to his cousin Joseph Lynam of the city of Dublin, under certain limitations, and he also devised to his said wife, inter alia, the tenement of Cant whereon he dwelt, she to reside and keep house at Cant, during her life, together with the reversion of the tenement of Porthilly, with remainder to his said cousin Joseph Lynam in tail male, in default of such issue, or forfeiture under certain limitations, to the brothers in succession of the said Joseph Lynam in tail male. By deed dated 9th July 1797, the said Joseph Lynam of Dublin and John Lynam, his only son and heir-at-law, conveyed Cant to the late William Sandys, Clerk, Vicar of St. Minver, and it is now enjoyed by his representative, Mrs. Stephens of Trewornan.

In what manner East Cant was acquired by the Robartes family we have failed to trace, but John Roberts of Truro, merchant, having by deed dated 28th August 2nd James (1604) purchased of Francis Penkevill of Rossorow, Esq. and Richard Penkevill, his son and heir apparent, the manor of Padstow (Penkevill); Cant, and other tenements in St. Minver, became annexed thereto, and when, by a certain deed of seven parts, dated 1st November 1755, that manor was sold by the representatives of the last Earl of Radnor to Humphry Prideaux of Prideaux Castle, Padstow, Esq., East Cant and other tenements in St. Minver were, inter alia, included in the same conveyance as attached to the manor, and are now held in that manner by Charles Prideaux-Brune of Prideaux Place, Esq. It appears from a rental of the manor of Worthevale, dated in 1819, that the Manor of Cant was then held of the manor of Worthevale by Sir James Laroche, at the rent of one penny per annum.⁵

PORTHILLY.

There are two estates of this name which adjoin each other, and are distinguished as Porthilly-Eglos, and Porthilly-Greys, the former from having on it the Chapel of St. Michael. It is situate at the head of Padstow harbour, and was formerly a place of more importance than at present, and possessed some amount of trade. It is sometimes described as a manor, but we doubt if it ever had any manorial franchises.

Our first notice of it is as early as 1284, in which year, in certain proceedings before the Justices of Assize, it was alleged that a certain Gumdreda Echeckere, some time before had died seized, inter alia, of Porthilli-Eglos and Porthilly-Gres, claimed by Ralph de Cheynduit as her heir, which was denied by Ralph de Bloyou and his brother Michael. It does not appear how these particular estates were affected by the verdict,¹ nor is the result easily ascertained by subsequent notices, the first of which is an assize of view of recognizance in 1347, to enquire if Daunamit de Porthilly and Margery his wife, Baldwin Skeler, William Shira and Walter de Porthilly, Clerk, had unjustly disseized Johanna, who was the wife of John Curtys of Porthilly, of his free tenement in Porthilly-Eglos. It was found that one John son of Ranolph Blaunsround of Rosgolon was seized of the tenement in his demesne as of fee, and granted it to the said Johanna, to hold of the said John and his heirs for ever; and that afterwards the said Johanna married John Curteys, which John granted the tenement to the said Baldwin and his heirs for ever, and that hence Baldwin did not disseize the said Johanna, who was in mercy for a false claim?² nevertheless in 1356, one Henry Dynan suffered a fine to Benedict Berele, inter alia, in Kanta, Porthilli-Eglos and Carlythyan, by which the said lands were settled upon the said Benedict for life, remainder to Thomas son of William Cheynduit and Margaret his wife and the heirs of their bodies, in default remainder to the right heirs of the said Benedict.³ The lands descended to John Cheynduit son and heir of the said Thomas, which John married Johanna daughter and heir of the aforesaid Benedict. John had no legitimate issue, and in 1435, a fine was levied in which John Hals and others were plaintiffs and the said John Cheynduit deforciant, whereby the said John settled the manor of Bodaman, to which Porthilly-Eglos was now attached, upon his bastard son Richard Cheynduit and the heirs of his body, in default of such issue remainder to Johanna, bastard daughter of the said John Cheynduit, the wife of John Pengelly.⁴

Twenty years later Porthilly was the property of John Luky. By his charter, dated at Porthilly 20th December 1444, John Luky of Porthilly granted to Ralph Dyer and

Margaret his wife, daughter to the said John, and formerly wife of John Gwynnowe, all his messuages, inter alia, in Porthilly-Eglos and Porthilly-Grese, to hold to them and the heirs of their bodies of the said John and his heirs for ever at the annual rent of one grain of wheat.¹

In 1st Edward IV. (1461,) Lena, or Leva, wife of Thomas Bonville, and daughter and heir of John Gorge, held the manor Porthilly of the manor of Blisland, whereof she died seized, and her grand-daughter Anna, daughter of John Bonville, was found to be her nearest heir, and to be of the age of twenty-three years and more.² Thomas Bonville continued to hold the land for the term of his life, by the courtesy of England, and died seized.³ Ann Bonville became the wife of Philip Copleston.

In 1540 Porthilly was part of the possessions of the family of Flamank of Boscarne, and by deed, dated 18th March 32nd Henry VIII. (1541), Gilbert Flamank granted to his brother Roger, inter alia, all his lands in Porthilly-Gres and Porthilly-Eglos.⁴

Lands in Porthilly were afterwards held by Thomas Bussell, whose heirs held them in 1569 of the manor of Bodanan, by military service and rent of 12d.,⁵ and Thomas Roscarrock, the heir of John Cheynduit, died thereof seized on 3rd February 1587.⁶ In January 1625-6, Bernard Harvey and Frances his wife, suffered a fine in the fourth part of two messuages, &c., and one stone quarry in Porthilly-Greys, Porthilly-Eglos, and Treverro to William Elliott,⁷ and in 1655 Richard Lynam suffered a fine to Robert Myll of the fourth part of two messuages in Porthilly-Grease and Porthilly-Eglos,⁸ whilst Richard Brabant and Dorothy his wife suffered a fine to Thomas Durell in the like lands.⁹ About this time the estate would appear to have been broken up, though, perhaps, there were several tenements besides Porthilly-Eglos and Porthilly-Gres. In 166—, several tenements were held of the manor of Blisland. Peter Day held eight acres in Porthilly at the rent of 6s.....Silly.....Jenkins and Lynam held one tenement at the rent of 5s. 4d.¹⁰ A fourth part of Porthilly-Greys and Porthilly-Eglos was held by John Lynam of Cant, who upon his marriage with Helen, daughter of Thomas Pyne of Dunsmere, by deed dated 23rd January 29th Charles II. 1677-8,¹¹ settled these lands as a part of his wife's dower. The estate held by Silly in Porthilly, by deed dated 15th July 1730, was conveyed to John Johns of St. Columb.¹² In 1838 Great Porthilly, containing eighty-three acres, was held by Humphry Wiliams, Esq., and Little Porthilly, containing fifty-three acres, by the said Humphry Williams and William Sandys Sandys, Esq.¹³

There are walls remaining of ancient buildings upon the Porthilly-Eglos and Porthilly-Greys, particularly a diagonally buttressed building upon the latter tenement. Norden describes Porthilly as "a hamlet and harbour wherein of late years there were a few or noe houses, now by their industrious fishing, and the blessing of God, the inhabitants so increase in abilitye, as their prosperity allureth others to resort to the place and daily increase the buildings that in a few years, if they continue prayerfull and religious, it will grow to be a prettie town." Mr. Boyne mentions a penny token struck by Richard Preese of Porthilly, which Mr. Worth, in his article on the "Tokens of Cornwall," rejects, we think somewhat hastily,¹ as a Cornish coin, and attributes it, chiefly from the name, "Preese," to Pwllheli in Wales. It is true we do not find the name Preese in the St. Minver registers, but that does not seem to us to be conclusive evidence against its being assigned to Porthilly, for we know that a considerable trade has always existed between Wales and Padstow.

MANOR OF PENTIRE.

According to the Return made before the Justices Itinerant, 12th Edward I, Pentire consisted of one-and-half Cornish acres. This manor, or reputed manor, was long held by a family to whom it gave its name, whose heiress married Thomas Roscarrock of Roscarrock, who is described as of Pentire (see Pedigree of ROSCARROCK, Hist. of Trigg Minor, vol. i, p. 562), and carried the estate into that family. Charles Roscarrock by his will, dated 6th January 1626, proved in the Archdeaconry Court of Cornwall, devised, inter alia, his manor of Pentire, with the warren of coneyes thereunto belonging;² for securing the payment of £400 a piece, to Chamond Roscarrock, Elizabeth Roscarrock and Joan Roscarrock, his younger children, by Charles Roscarrock his son and heir, when he should attain full age. Charles Roscarrock having taken part with the king in the rebellion of the seventeenth century compounded for his estate, and John Barton of the Middle Temple, who had married Joan Roscarrock, on 5th June 1649 complained that though Charles Roscarrock had attained his full age ten years previously, he had not paid any part of the said sum due to complainant's wife.³

Charles Roscarrock, the younger, died, in 1665, without issue male. In his will, dated 6th October in that year,⁴ he settled his lands for the purpose of providing portions for his four younger daughters, but, he says, as to his daughter Arabella, her interest in Pentire will be sufficient provision. Arabella Roscarrock was living unmarried in 1687. It is believed she died single, and that Pentire passed to her next sister, Elizabeth, who, in 1672, had married John Hunt of Compton Pauncefoot, co. Somerset, Esq. She died before 1700, s.p.,⁵ but Pentire became vested in fee in John Hunt, by whom it was sold to Thomas Hearle of Penryn, Esq., and from him it descended to his son John Hearle and grandson Francis Hearle. The latter died s.p., and his sisters became his co-heirs, of whom Harriet, the elder, married Henry Hawkins Tremayne of Heligan, Clerk, to whom, in addition to the manors of Tregullog and Trembethowe, she carried the Bartons of Treworder, in Egloshayle, and Pentire.¹ All these lands are now possessed by John Tremayne of Heligan, Esq., at this time (1875) one of the Knights of the Shire in Parliament, and grandson of the said Henry Hawkins Tremayne. The manor, if it ever existed, would seem to have been long dismembered.

Pentireglaze, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, was parcel of the manor of Pendavy in Egloshayle, then vested in the crown, and the Queen, by charter dated 4th March anno 28, granted to George Storie and others, inter alia, two tenements in Pentireglas: viz., in the north part of the same, then in the occupation of Thomas Stone, reserving the rent of 26s. 8d., which rent was granted, inter alia, with the manor of Pendavy by letters patent, dated 27th June 42nd Elizabeth, to Michael Stanhope, Esq., one of the grooms of the chamber and Edward Stanhope, Doctor of Laws.² It is now the property, by recent purchase, of Lord Robartes.

TREVIGOE alias TREVEGOE.

This estate, which contains 280 acres, was formerly a customary tenement of the manor of Blisland. It was held by the family of Stone as early as 1473. In that year Benedict Hamely, executor of the will of John Hamely, sued Roger Stone of Trevigy, in the parish of St. Mynfrede, husbandman, and Johanna his wife, daughter and heir of John Whyting, late of Trebederek, for a debt of £20.³ This alliance is shewn in the Pedigree of STONE, registered in the Herald's College, in which Roger Stone is called Roger Stephens at Stone. His grandson is described as John Stone at Trevego, the name of Stephens being dropped.⁴ "Trauegie," says Norden, "is the house wherein Stone inhabiteth, but the land is St. Michael Stanhop's."⁵ It descended to William Stone, grandson of the abovementioned John, who was assessed to the Subsidy in St. Minver in 1622 and 1625.⁶

Soon after this date the estate held by the family of Stone in Trevigoe terminated.

⁵ The manor of Blisland was granted to Michael Stanhope, D.C.L., and Edward Stanhope his brother, by letters patent, dated 27th June 1598, who, by deed dated 6th August 4th James (1606), sold it to William Parker (see Hist. of Trigg Minor, vol. i, p. 33.)

and we lose all trace of its devolution for a considerable period. In 1723, it was vested in William Luke of Lyon's Inn, co. Middlesex, Gent., who suffered a fine therein, and in certain premises in Portquin, to William Glynn of Truro, Gent., and Ann his wife; and by indenture dated 29th September 1723, the said premises were settled on the said William Glynn and Ann his wife, and the survivor of them for life, remainder to such uses as the said Ann might, by any instrument in writing, appoint. William Glynn died in 1730,¹ leaving Ann his wife surviving, who by her will, dated 19th November, 1746, and proved 15th November 1758,² devised all her lands and real estate, whatsoever, unto her cousin Humphry Hickes of the parish of Paul, co. Cornwall, Gent., and his heirs and assigns. Humphry Hickes left an only child, Mary Hickes, who afterwards married the Rev. Vincent Warren of Plymstock, co. Devon,³ and by her will, dated 16th April 1792, devised Trevigoe and all her messuages and lands to Humphry Julian for the term of his life, subject to an annuity of £31 10s., to James Julian, of Plymouth, wine merchant, brother of the said Humphry, remainder after the decease of the said Humphry to Robert Hickes of Saltash, Esq., his heirs and assigns, subject to the payment aforesaid. By indentures of lease and release, dated respectively 26th and 27th October 1800, the said Robert, then of Exeter, conveyed a moiety of Trevigoe to Elizabeth Spicer, wife of William Spicer, Captain in the Royal Artillery, and one of the two daughters of the said Robert Hickes, to her absolute use, subject to the life estate of the aforesaid Humphry Julian and the annuity to the aforesaid James Julian; and by indentures of the same date, the said Robert Hickes conveyed the other moiety to Jenny Tross of Exeter, widow, and relict of William Long Tross, the other of his two daughters, under the like limitations: which said Jenny Tross afterwards intermarried with George Fortescue, Clerk, and by deed of settlement thereupon, dated 11th and 12th May 1801, the moiety of the said premises was conveyed to Trustees to use of the said George Fortescue and Jenny during their joint lives, and to the survivor of them, remainder to the issue of such marriage in such proportion as the said Jenny, by her will or other writing, might appoint. Jenny died in 1821 intestate and without making any settlement, leaving her husband, and her only child George Frederick Fortescue her heir at law, surviving, the only issue of the said Jenny by her marriage with William Long Trosse being a daughter, afterwards married to Edmund Fortescue, Esq., which said George Frederick Fortescue attained the age of twenty-one years in August 1823.

We thus find the estate of Trevigoe divided into moieties between the issue of the two daughters of Robert Hickes, and by indenture dated 7th April 1827, their representatives: viz., George Fortescue of Teignmouth, Clerk, George Frederick Fortescue of the same place, Esq., his only child by Jenny his wife, one of the two daughters of Robert Hicks, Edward Charleton, Captain in the 61st Regiment of Foot, and Elizabeth Trosse his

William Warren and Mary Hicks, conveyed the entirety of the estate to Samuel Symons of St. Minver, Esq. Mr. Symons died on the 16th December 1854, and by his will, proved in 1855, devised, inter alia, the estate of Trevigoe to his only daughter, now the wife of W. R. C. Potter of Gonvena, Esq.

TREVELVER.

We find this place mentioned as early as 1302. In that year William de Trevelvars suffered a fine to Roger de Nonaunt in one messuage and one carucate of land, with appurtenances, in Trevelvargh, for which fine Roger gave the said William one sparrow hawk. Trevelver was, in 1475,¹ the seat of the family of Kempe, afterwards of Lavethan in Blisland. In that year John Kempe, junr., sued John Hyke, Bocher, in a plea of trespass at Trevelver. It long continued in the family of Kempe. John Kempe held lands in St. Minver of the value of 53s. 3d. per annum 1521-3,² and Margaret Kempe was assessed to the subsidy there in 1571.³ John Kempe, second son of Thomas Kempe of Lavethan, was seated at Trevelver. In 1572 he married Winifred daughter of Philip Penkevill of Rosserowe. From John Kempe it passed to his eldest son of the same name, who, in 1630, suffered a fine⁴ to John Silly, Gent., in two messuages, two gardens, two orchards, one hundred acres of land, ten acres of meadow, sixty acres of pasture, ten acres of furse and heath, and ten acres of moor in Over Trevelver and Nether Trevelver.⁵ The Trevelver branch of the family of Silly became extinct about the year 1707, when the estates, which were greatly encumbered, passed to Nathaniel Shepherd of London, who had married Jane Silly, daughter of William Silly of Trevelver, and the last survivor of the family.⁶ The lease of Trevelver, Dynham, and Carlyan for a term of 999 years was soon afterwards sold to Francis Arundell of London, Merchant, who dying possessed of considerable wealth, by his will, dated 9th August 1712,⁷ devised these lands to his nephew John Arundell, who, in a deed dated 17th April 1727, is described as of Trevelver.⁸ He died 1741, and was succeeded by his son and heir Thomas Arundell. The latter by his marriage settlement, dated 15th September 1737, so settled his lands that in the event of his dying without issue male, Trevelver, Carlyan, and Dinham should devolve upon his nephew, John Arundell, son of his brother Francis Arundell of Henlade, co. Somerset. Thomas Arundell died in 1754 leaving two surviving daughters, named Mary and Phillis, for whom, by his will, dated 7th October 1750,¹ he made suitable provision, but the estates in St. Minver passed to John Arundell under the limitations of the above-mentioned settlement. He died at Creech St. Michael, co. Somerset, in 1784, unmarried, and by his will, dated 4th September 1782,² devised Trevelver and his other lands in St. Minver to Trustees to the use of his mother, Mary Arundell of Creech St. Michael, for life, remainder to his cousins Phillis Arundell, and Phillis Arundell O'Neill the daughter of Clotworthy O'Neill of the city of Bristol, by Mary eldest daughter of the aforesaid Thomas Arundell, successively in tail male, and in default of such issue, to the daughters of the said Phillis and Phillis Arundell, as tenants in common: provided however, that if either of them should take to her husband any man being a native of Scotland or Ireland the devise should stand revoked, and her share should devolve upon the other, and if both should so marry he devised all his lands and manors to his mother Mary Arundell, her heirs and assigns for ever. Mary Arundell died at Crickhill, near Taunton, at an advanced age about 1795,³ and her niece Phillis Arundell having predeceased her, unmarried, the lands devolved upon the aforesaid Phillis Arundell O'Neill, who married William Monier Yeo of Bristol Hot Wells, Surgeon, the grandfather of William Arundell Yeo of Fremington, co. Devon, Esq., the present possessor. (See ped. post)

The house is very pleasantly situate overlooking the estuary of the Hayle, and commands extensive views beyond the river. Very little of the old mansion continues in existence. Two three-light mullioned windows remain in situ at the back of the house and some of the old walls, but the chief portion has been removed, and the remainder greatly altered to convert the house into a farm house. There is a panell'd parlour, but not of very early workmanship; on the panel over the fire place is painted a view of the old mansion very rudely executed. It is shewn as a somewhat long building, of two stories, inclosed in a court-yard, having projecting gabled wings, the mullioned windows low and wide with square hood mouldings. Around the room, below the cornice, is a curious painting representing the surrounding scenery in a panoramic manner. A straight road is shewn from the front door to the river, and at the back another, equally straight, leading to the windmill, known as St. Minver Windmill, on the hill behind. This hill rises to a height of 296 feet, and the windmill is a prominent object at great distances.⁴ There is said to have been a Chapel at Trevelver, but see ante p. 43.

St. Minver Steeple is in latitude $50^{\circ} 33' 30.6$; longitude from St. Agnes Beacon $0^{\circ} 20' 28.1$ E; and longitude from Greenwich, in degrees, $4^{\circ} 51' 27.6$, and in time $19^m 25^s.8$ (Mudge's Account of the Operations on account of the Trigonometrical Survey, vol. ii, p. 124, 1801.)

DINHAM.

Early in the seventeenth century, Dinham belonged to the family of Kent, and in 1639, Thomas Kent, Gent., and Johanna his wife suffered a fine to John Silly, Gent., in one messuage, two mills, two gardens, one orchard, fifty acres of land, ten acres of meadow, fifty acres of pasture, one acre of wood, and ten acres of furze and heath in Dinham. It subsequently passed to the family of Arundell, with Trevelver and Carlyan, from which family it descended to William Arundell Yeo of Fremington, co. Devon, Esq., the present proprietor, whose father William Arundell Yeo, Esq., M.D., before acquiring the Fremington estate, built for himself a comfortable residence at Dinham, which is now tenanted by Captain Onslow, eldest son of Sir Mathew Onslow of Hengar, Bart.

TRELAWDER.

Trelawder, in this parish, was, as early as the fifteenth century, parcel of the possessions of a younger branch of the ancient family of Billing, who from it derived the name of Trelawder, frequently used as an alias. Richard Billing of Hengar died in 1624, seized of various manors and lands, inter alia, two parts in three parts divided in Treleder, alias Trelawder, in St. Minver. It afterwards became the property of George Browne of Bodmin, Gent., from whom it descended to his great grandson, John Basset Collins of Bodmin, Gent., who has recently sold it to W. Teague of Truro, Gent.

A tenement called "Sparnell's Weens," containing about twelve acres, forms parcel of the endowment of the Chapel of Temple.

FAMILY HISTORY.

DE CANT alias DE CANTA.

We have already given some account of this family, whose name was also occasionally written de Kant, and de Kent, in our account of the estate from which the name was derived. The first person of the name of whom we have any knowledge was Sir Thomas de Cancia, Knight, who, on the 15th Kalends of June 1275, wrote a letter to Walter Bronescombe, Bishop of Exeter, in which he acknowledged that he was present and assisting in certain violence and injustice offered to the Priests and Clerks of Gargaul, in the Diocese of Exeter, and that he had been guilty of other enormities against the liberties of the Church, whereby he had fallen under the greater excommunication. In satisfaction for these offences he took an oath to pay to the Bishop a sum of fifty marks, and pledged himself that he would not, from thenceforth, commit such violence or injuries, or any other, against the Church or ecclesiastical persons under a penalty of £50, and he obliged himself by this oath that if he should fail in the observance of the premises, the Bishop, after giving him one single warning, might, without process of law, thrust him back into his pristine sentence of excommunication. After this follows a receipt for fifty marks from Thomas de Cancia for trespass in the park of Gargaul, which would hence appear to have been his principal offence.¹ This was doubtless the same Sir Thomas de Kant, Knight, who is mentioned in the Assize Roll for Cornwall in 1284.² Five years later an assize of view of recognizance was granted to enquire if Thomas de Kancia and others had disseized Odo de Treures and Roesia his wife of their free tenement in Bosvoil-gomneyl juxta Derwydel, when the said Thomas obtained the verdict.³ He died in 1299, and was buried in the Church of the Grey Friars at Bodmin.⁴ In 1309 an assize of view of recognizance was granted to enquire if William Botreaux, Richard his brother, Ralph Kancia, and others had disseized Peter de Trenaenwen and Henry de Pengersiek of their free tenement in Vosh juxta Treneglos. William Botreaux pleaded that he held the tenement in view as the portion of Dionis his wife, who not being named in the writ, the plaintiffs were nonsuited.¹ In 1335, Walter de Kent and Roger de Kent were, with several others, defendants in a suit at the instance of Robert de Trewynnok and William Crowen, concerning their free tenements in Camelford, and lands contiguous,² and in 1327 Bartholomew de Canta was assessed to the subsidy in St. Minver.³ In 1351 an assize of view of recognizance was granted to enquire if Mr. Thomas de Carminowe and Walter de Kent had unjustly disseized Simon Foll of Bodmin and others of their free tenement in Northon Lancarfe. Upon the issue Thomas Carminow pleaded as tenant, and said that in the county of Cornwall there was a certain Mr. Thomas Carminow, the son of Oliver de Carminow, and also himself, who was the son of John Carminow, who is not known by the name of Magister, nor ever had a standing in the Schools, through which he ought not to be so named. The jury found accordingly, and the complainants were non-suited,⁴ though in the following year, in a new suit, they recovered seizin. In 1354, Otto de Bodrigan and Johanna his wife levied a fine of Nicholas de Bodrigan and Walter de Kent of twenty messuages, &c., in Trelathsmur, &c., whereby the said lands were settled upon the said Otto and Johanna and the heirs of their bodies, and, in default, remainder to the right heirs of the said Johanna;⁵ and in the following year, John Shyrelek, Keeper of the Fees of the Duchy of Cornwall, accounted, inter alia, for £11 2s. 2½d. of relief of Walter Kent for 3½ fees of Mortaine in Tremodreth, which he acquired of Sir William Bodrigan, Knt., and held as of the Castle of Launceston; and for a like sum received of Sir William Bodrigan for the same fees which he had acquired of Ralph Kent and Walter Reseruk.⁶ The elder branch of the family would appear to have become extinct early in the 14th century, but we find the name still continuing in the 15th.⁷ In 1412 Roger Cant was plaintiff in a suit against John Chenduit of Bodanan, in a plea of novel disseizin, which case was not concluded in 1414.⁸ The name still exists in St. Minver in the form of Kent. Robert Kent possessed goods and chattels in the parish to the value of £20, and arms for one man in 1521, and at the same time Thomas Kent had goods of the value of £4.⁹ The name occurs among the earliest in the parish Registers, marked with a significant mark, which, we think, is intended to shew that the Kents were above the ordinary condition. Among the names so marked is that of Thomas Kent, who was farmer of the tithes of St. Minver in the time of Elizabeth, and was probably the same Thomas Kent who, with Johanna his wife, in 1600 suffered a fine in Pendevy in Egloshayle, to Thomas Kestell.¹⁰ The Kents, for a considerable time, held Trefresa in this parish. (See monumental inscriptions, ante pp. 30, 31, 41.) The late Mr. Thomas Kent of Padstow was an antiquary of considerable attainments. He was sometime British Consul in Spain, and made a collection of coins, fibulae, leads, glass, and pottery, from the site of the Roman town of Carteia. The articles very closely resemble those of the same kind which he collected from the Roman Station in St. Minver. Both collections are now in the possession of his daughter. (See ante p. 8.)

REYNWARD.

Among the most ancient families of the parish of St. Minver is that of Reynward. Our earliest notice of the name is in 1283, when Ralph Reynward was party to a fine for effecting a settlement of the manors of Lanowmure and Lanivet on Hugh de Munckton and Katherine his wife, and others in remainder.¹ Benedict Reynward was a man of considerable wealth. In 1296 we find him as surety for David, Vicar of Liskeard, and for Henry le Denys, Rector of Lesnewith, for payment of the fines inflicted upon them for refusing, in obedience to the Pope, to pay the subsidies levied by the King.² He was also one of the jurors on an Inquisition concerning the Fees of the Crown in 1303,³ and three years later, we find him and his fellows (Reynward and Co., as we should now say,) very large holders of tin, which was stamped at Bodmin and Lostwithiel.⁴ Richard Reynward was one of the assessors of the subsidy for the parish of St. Endellion in 1326,⁵ and Mathew Reynward was one of the valuers and venditors of the ninths and fifteenths in the parish of St. Minver in 1340.⁶ In 1348 Jordan Reynward was returned as one of the Burgesses to serve in Parliament for the Borough of Bodmin, on which occasion William and Richard Reynward were his mancaptors.⁷ In 1337 John Reynward held a mill within the manor of Penmayne called Treswarhon,⁸ at the rent of 12d. per annum, which he held also in 1345.⁹ In 1354 William Reynward was witness to a deed dated at Wym juxta Treglotherou,¹⁰ and in 1361 he was witness to another deed, dated at Trewythek.¹¹ In 1423 William Reynward was a tenant of the manor of Trevisquite.¹² In 1460, John Reynward was Prepositus of the Borough of Bossyny,¹³ and in 1469, Walter White and another took a tenement of the manor of Penmayne, which had formerly been held by Jordan Reynward.¹ In 1504, John Reynward gave a fine to the Lord to be allowed to hold a tenement in the manor of Penmayne,² and in 1506, we find John Reynward, Esq., as one of the witnesses to a charter dated at Kestell in Egloshayle.³ In 1557, Sir Richard Reynward was instituted to the Vicarage of St. Minver.⁴ About this time, or a little earlier, Isabell daughter and coheir of John Raynward married John Penkevill.⁵ The name, however, still lingered. On 9th November 1577, Thomas Raynward was buried at St. Minver,⁶ and in 1687, William Kekewich and Walter Reynard levied a fine of John Billing, alias Trelawder, of three messuages in Bosyerne in Egloshayle.⁷

PENKEVILL.

The public records afford us very little information respecting this ancient family, which is supposed to have derived its name from the Lordship of Penkevill, in the Hundred of Pyder. Hals suggests that the original name was De Wenn.⁸ The first occurrence of the name of Penkevill, of which we have any knowledge, is in 1234, when Simon Penkevill held three acres of land in Cornwall of the Bishop of Exeter, for which he rendered 6s. per annum, and aid as accustomed to be offered.⁹ In 1265 John de Penkefel was witness to a charter relating to Tregothnan.¹⁰ Another John, in 1294, was surety for Ralph de Pridias, Parson of the Church of St. Winyero (Gwinear) for the payment of the fine intitled upon him for having, in obedience to the Pope, refused to pay a subsidy levied by the King.¹¹ According to an old pedigree recorded at the Herald's Visitation of Cornwall in 1570,¹² John was Lord of Penkevill in 16th Edward II, (1342). His son of the same name flourished 1364, and he was, probably, the same John Penkevill who was collector of subsidies in 1384, and in 1387,¹³ and who, on behalf of his wife Alianora, was a party in a plea of novel disseizin against William Lambron and others.¹⁴ And it was probably his son, of the same name, who, with William Cayleway sued Thomas Mency and others in an assize of view of recognizance to recover twelve messuages in St. Neot.¹⁵ This last, by Elizabeth daughter and heir of Thomas Trevilles, was the father of two sons. John, the eldest, continued the elder branch, which, Hals says: "flourished here (Penkevill) in gentle degree, between the dignities of a Justice of the Peace and that of a Hundred Constable till about the middle of Queen Elizabeth's Reigne, when the same by Penkevill's heir was given, or sold, to George Courteney, Gent., Attorney at Lawe 1570;" and, he adds "I take it (the name) now to be quite extinct in these parts"¹ Laurence Penkevill, son of the last named John, was collector of subsidies in 1520,² whose grandson John had two sons: John who married Mary the daughter of Thomas Dennys, and of whom we have no further information, and Alexander, who was mayor of Helstone in 1587.³

Thomas, the younger son of John Penkevill and Elizabeth Trevilles, married Margaret daughter and co-heir of William Mohun of Puswith, and was the ancestor of the Penkevills of Rosserowe. Our earliest knowledge of their connection with St. Minver is in 1542, when Philip Penkevill, Gent., levied a fine of John Waldegrave, Esq., of one messuage, one toft, sixty acres of land, two acres of meadow, forty acres of pasture and sixty acres of furze and heath in Minver. Tenant and Carlyan:⁴ and in 1558, Philip Penkevill was assessed to the subsidy in St. Minver upon lands of the annual value of £7.⁵ Whether or no this assessment included Rosserow, we are unable to state. This Philip was son and heir of John Penkevill of Penkevill, by Isabell daughter and coheir of John Rayneward, an ancient family of some standing in the parish of St. Minver. (See ante p. 69.) Whether or no Rosserowe was acquired by this marriage, or through other means, we have no evidence to shew, but it should be remarked that neither the name of Reynward, nor that of Penkevill, is to be found in the Return, Appendix iii. Philip Penkevill died in 1562 leaving a large family, and was succeeded at Rosserowe by his son and heir, Francis, who, in 1571, was rated to the subsidy upon lands at £8, and in 1600 upon £12.⁶ This gentleman, in a certain litigation respecting the tithes of St. Minver in 1578, is stated to have in his possession and occupation divers great bartons, &c., amounting to one fourth of the whole area of the parish.⁶ By his extravagance, or reckless speculation, on his death, in 1622, he left his estate greatly impoverished. Richard, his son and heir, had married Jane daughter and sole heir of Henry Pomeroy of Tregony Pomeroy, the last of that great house,⁷ who in 1598 quit-claimed to the said Richard and Jane his wife the manor of Tregony,⁸ and Richard Penkevill also inherited other possessions. He died before his father, leaving a large Fin. 25th Elizabeth, Trinity.) We do not know if this is the John mentioned in the text. He was, probably, the same who was instituted to the Vicarage of St. Teuth in 1573, and resigned in 1586.

Edward Penkevill of St. Michael Penkevill, Gent., made his will on 10th October 1656, and settled an annuity for life upon his mother, Jane Penkevill, widow, and upon his two brothers Jonathan and Thomas Penkevill. Jonathan was residing in Jamaica. He also mentions his brother-in-law, Mr. Halse, and Francis Halse his son which he had by his (testator's) sister Katherine Penkevill. family of six sons and four daughters. What became of his sons we are unable to state. Francis the eldest, in 1626, sold the manor of Tregony to Hugh Boscawen,¹ and probably died young. Hugh, the second, married Dorothy Polstag at Bodmin in 1641,² and retired to Persquillis in St. Ewe, where he died in 1672, leaving seven children. Dorothy Penkevill, described as of Creed, widow, administered to his estate, and it appears from her account, dated 7th October in that year, that the value of the whole of his personalty amounted to £37 18s. only, and that the expenses of the funeral, probate, &c., and the debts were £27 15s., "leaving a balance of £10 3s., to be divided among seven children." We presume he left one son, Richard Penkevill, who married Mary daughter of John Archer, Clerk, Rector of St. Michael Carhayes, by whom he had an only child named Benjamin. The latter matriculated at Oxford on 8th March 1696-7 as the "son of Richard Penkevill of Langastey ex Brecon," and as a poor scholar. Richard Penkevill, though thus sometime resident in Wales, returned to St. Ewe, where he died of putrid fever in 1687, at the early age of thirty-four, and his son Benjamin died at Blisland of the small pox in 1699, the last of his race of that branch.³

Upon the death of Richard Penkevill in 1622, Rosserowe probably devolved upon his son Anthony, who was assessed to the subsidy upon lands in St. Minver in 1625, at the reduced rate of £5 per annum,⁴ as he was again in 1628,⁵ soon after which Rosserowe was sold to Alexander Carew of Antony, Esq. Anthony Penkevill was twice married and had several children. What became of them after leaving St. Minver we know not. A Thomas Penkevill of St. Andrews, Holborn, died in 1673, but in his will, dated 22nd October 1671, he names no relations.⁶

In 1596 Francis Penkevill and Katherine his wife conveyed to their son Richard, Tregavern in St. Endellion, and Tregear in St. Kew,⁷ and these farms afterwards passed to Thomas, youngest brother of the said Richard, who, in 1625, married Dorothy daughter of Nicholas Mathew of Tregildren in St. Kew,⁸ and settled at Tregear. In 1656 Benjamin Penkevill, son and heir of Thomas Penkevill, Gent., levied a fine of the said Thomas and Dorothy his wife, of six messuages in Tregear, Ambell-Eglos and Tregavern; and in the same term, the said Benjamin suffered a fine in one messuage in Amble-Eglos to Thomas Callaway. Benjamin had a daughter named Ursula, who, in 1687, married Thomas Hill of Michaelstow.

We may add that Edward Noye of Mangan in Pyder, in his will dated 25th October 1621, proved 27th July 1622 (Saville, 65) names his daughter Jane Penkevill, who was probably the mother of Edward (see Note 4, page 71), and we find that as late as 28th May 1757, John Penkevill of Stoke Damerel, bricklayer, obtained a license to marry Jane Wilcox of Charles, Plymouth.

STONE OF TREVIGOE.

The original name of this family was Stephens. John Stephens resided at a place called Stone, perhaps Stone in St. Maben, probably early in the 15th century. His son, Roger Stephens at Stone, married Joan daughter and heir of John Whitling of Trebederick before 1479, who was grandson of William Whitling who lived in the 14th century. John Stephens, the grandson of the abovementioned Roger, would still seem to have resided at Stone, but his son is described as "John Stone of Trévogoe," and was the first, probably, who acquired that estate, in which, as stated by Norden, the Stones never had more than a leasehold interest. John Stone was, however, a landowner in St. Minver in 1521-3,¹ though he does not appear to have resided in the parish. We first find him assessed to the subsidy therein in 1558.² By Johanna, daughter of John Callard of Callard, co. Devon, he had one son, Thomas Stone, who succeeded him at Trevigoe, and seven daughters. Thomas, by Elizabeth daughter of William Harris of Hayne,³ had two sons, of whom John died abroad, and William was of Trevigoe. He was assessed to the subsidy in St. Minver as late as 1625,⁴ but we have no further notice of him. Whether upon the expiration of his lease in Trevigoe, he removed elsewhere, or whether he died s.p., we have no knowledge. We incline to the former suggestion as no record of his burial is found in the Parish Registers of St. Minver, moreover, in the pedigree recorded in the Herald's College, marks of issue are given to both William and John. Lysons states that the Stones of Bodmin were descended from this family, but we have failed to trace the connection. (See Hist. of Trigg Minor, vol. i, p. 312.)

MABLY.

Among the old families of this parish, we must not omit to mention that of Mably. Others, perhaps of a higher grade, are past and gone. In many instances their name is unknown, but the Mablys still continue as landowners in St. Minver.

The earliest occurrence of the name was in the case of Henry Mably, who, in 1337, with others, held in convention thirty-five acres of waste in Trewarman (Trewarnet,) in Tintagel,¹ and who was Prepositus there in 1349.²

We find the Mablys settled in St. Minver in the early part of the reign of Henry VIII. Four of the name are included in the Return of 1521-3,³ and we have before us a receipt, dated 20th June 3rd Edward VI. given by Thomas Kestell, Receiver of the King for the Manor of Temple, for the sum of 3s. 1½d. received of William Mabley, son and heir of Johanna Mabley, widow, deceased, for relief of one ferling of land in Pylhouse, parcel of the said manor, which the said Johanna held of the King's Majesty, at the time of her death, in soccage. In 1557 John Mabley of Trebederick levied a fine of Henry Mablye of two messuages in Trebederick and Padstow.⁴ And we find the name occurring among the earliest in the parish registers. In 1657 Thomas Sparnell, alias Tanken, and Margey his wife, suffered a fine of one messuage in Trebederick to Humphry Mabley.⁵ In the early part the 18th century, William Mably was of Treverra in this parish, which his descendants still hold, and Mr. John Mably possesses the land in Trebederick said to have been held by his ancestor in the time of Henry VIII.

MOYLE OF MOYLES.

The yeomanry family of Moyle was of Moyles in this parish. John Moyle was a landowner in St. Minver in 1521, and Richard Moyle and Stephen Moyle, at the same time, were among the most substantial inhabitants. (See Appendix III.) Henry Moile took the passage of Blacktorre at the assession of the manor of Penmayne in 1574,⁶ and Henry Moile son of John Moile son of the above Henry, held one moiety thereof in 1588,⁷ and continued to hold it in 1618.⁸ Thomas Moyle, together with other children, had a a son named Thomas, baptized in 1596, who by his wife Jane, daughter of Thomas Kent, with other issue, had two sons: Thomas who carried on the succession in St. Minver, and Constantine who settled at Tretheven in St. Kew. (See Ped. Hist. of Trigg Minor, v. ii, 265.) Thomas Moyle, son and heir of the last mentioned Thomas, by his wife Jane, daughter of John Peters, had a son and heir named Richard, who is described as "of Moyles" in 1747, upon the gravestone of his only child Sarah. (See Inscriptions, ante No. 5, p. 27.) Moyles has now passed out of the family, but the name of Moyle still survives in the parish.

PETERS.

In this parish was born John Peters an eminent Quaker minister, who was, probably, the originator of the Society at St. Minver, and the founder of the Meeting House and Burial ground at Treglynes. His parents were Charles and Philippa Peters who were not Quakers. He was born at St. Minver on 13th September 1645, but we do not find any record of his baptism. At about twenty-five years of age he married a young woman, whose name was Margery, who survived him. It appears from his life that: "Soon after his marriage strong convictions fell upon him, which appeared in that he could not freely comply with sprinkling his children and pretending thereby to make them Christians, as also in the purification of his wife after child-birth, as they term it, which looking upon as a Judaical rite he would not away [sic] with. so joined himself to the Quakers in 1672, and in some short time after the Lord was pleased to give him the grace of the ministry." He was, for many years, steward for the family of Carew of Rosserowe. During this time he was imprisoned in the Sheriff's ward at Bodmin for refusing to pay his tithes, and afterwards, in 1683 and 1684, at Launceston for refusing to take the oath of allegiance when tendered to him. Sir John Carew offered to procure his liberation if he would emigrate to New England, but this he refused to do. He continued to hold the office of steward to the Carew family at Rosserowe until 1703, when he resigned, and devoted himself wholly to the ministry of his persuasion. He died at St. Minver on 11th July, and was buried at the Meeting House on 13th July 1708. He never published any of his writings, but after his death one Thomas Gwin of Falmouth published in 12mo. a brief narrative of his life, &c., which bears the following long title: "A brief narative of the Life, Service, and Sufferings of that Faithful servant of Jesns Christ John Peters, who departed this life in the 63rd year of his age, on the 11th day of the 7th month 1708, and was Buried in Friends Burying-Place at Minver in the Connty of Cornwall, the 13th of the same. Together with the Testimonies of His relations and other Faithful Friends, concerning his Christian example in the Church of Christ. London: Printed and sold by F. Sowle, in White-Hart Court in Gracious-Street, 1709"

A copy of this rare little volume is in the Library at Trewornan.

ARUNDELL OF TREVELVER.

We find the name of Arundell in the parish of St. Minver in the early part of 17th century. George Arundell, Esq., had two daughters baptized in 1613¹ and 1614² respectively; but we know of no connection between this George Arundell and the Arundells of Trevelver. The latter came into the parish in consequence of the purchase, about the year 1710, by Mr. Francis Arundell of London, Merchant, of Trevelver, Dinham and Carlyan. This gentleman was the third and youngest son of William Arundell of Falmouth, Merchant, whom we believe, though we have no direct evidence upon the subject, to have been identical with William the second son of William Arundell of Camborne, who, at the Heralds' Visitation of Cornwall in 1620, registered his pedigree from his grandfather Robert Arundell, described in that pedigree as the second son of Sir John Arundell of Trevice, but who was illegitimate, as appears from two deeds, dated respectively, 4th January 1st Edward VI, and 26th January 2nd Elizabeth, cited in the Inquisition post mortem of the said Sir John Arundell.³ The abovementioned Francis Arundell had a trading establishment at Leghorne, and would seem to have acquired considerable wealth. On his death in 1713, s.p., he devised his lands recently purchased in St. Minver, subject to certain charges, to his nephew John Arundell, whom we suppose to have been the son of the testator's elder brother Thomas Arundell, though of this we have no proof, and he may, therefore, have been the son of the testator's other brother, William. John Arundell came to reside at Trevelver, and is described as of that place in a deed dated in 1725. This John Arundell by Agnes his wife, daughter of Gales, had two sons, Thomas and Francis. By his will, dated 5th June 1738, he gave to his younger son Francis Arundell, inter alia, the silver candlesticks which were fluted and had his coat of arms; and to his wife he gave the large silver tea-kettle, with his coat of arms and the Gales' coat of arms on it,⁴ for her own use for her life, with remainder to his youngest son Francis Arundell "he also having married with the Gales family as I myself had done." Thomas Arundell also in his will, dated 9th October 1750, mentions his "Cornelian seal with his arms thereon, and his father Arundell's with his name and arms." Having already (under TREVELVER ante pp. 64, 65.) given some account of this family, it seems to be unnecessary here to do more than refer to the annexed pedigree.

¹ It appears from a survey of the possessions of the Collegiate Church of St. Piran, made on 24th August 1281, by two Canons of Exeter Cathedral, that, at that date, this district suffered greatly from the drifting sands. The jury found that the rents of assize of the College Estate were £2 3s. 2½d., but that the demesne at that time produced 10s. only, in consequence of the excessive depreciation from the abovementioned cause: "quia ultra modum deterioratur per sabulonem." Summa hujus parochie ad Subsidium predictum iii*li* xix*s* ij*d*

It is interesting to compare this Assessment with the Return preceding it, made twenty years earlier, and to notice the changes in the names of the inhabitants and the alterations in the value of their possessions. It will be observed that the names "Gyon" and "Byllyng," who were among the principal inhabitants in 1521-3, are no longer found in St. Minver. The latter will be found rated in St. Tudy. (See Hist. of Trigg Minor, vol. i, p. 388.)
